Passengers seize jet

Pilot's strike causes cabin revolution

PARIS (AP) — Passengers aboard a French jetliner, enraged at their pilot's decision to go on strike a few minutes before takeoff, seized the aircraft and forced the company to find them an alternative flight, airline officials said.

The plane was on the tarmac ready for takeoff, its 280 passengers in buckled seatbelts, when the pilot told the travellers he had just decided to join a strike by his company's ground crew, the officials said.

The A-300 Airbus of Air Inter, the French domestic airline, was to have flown Friday night from Orly Airport outside Paris to Marseilles on the Mediterranean.

Officials said a group of passengers crowded around the cockpit door and told the pilot they would hold him there until he agreed to take off.

The passengers then appointed an impromptu "consumer rights committee" and a heated shouting match broke out between the crew and the customers.

Air Inter officials boarded the plane and tried to soothe the passengers by handing out packaged meals and drinks. Air Inter usually serves no food, and charges about $1.25 for an in-flight fruit juice.

Meanwhile, an alternative plane was found to take the passengers to Lyon, where buses were laid on to transport them the remaining 320 kilometres to Marseilles.

The majority accepted the compromise, but 100 passengers refused to leave the plane until they were given a flight to Marseilles. So Air Inter chartered an aircraft that flew them to the Mediterranean city, five hours after the incident began.

Air Inter ground crews are on strike to fight the dismissal of a colleague on charges of theft. The strike is scheduled to end Monday.

Shifting embassy costing millions

TORONTO (CP) — Canada is losing contracts in the Middle East worth tens of millions of dollars since Prime Minister Joe Clark announced the move of the Canadian embassy in Israel, according to the Toronto Star.

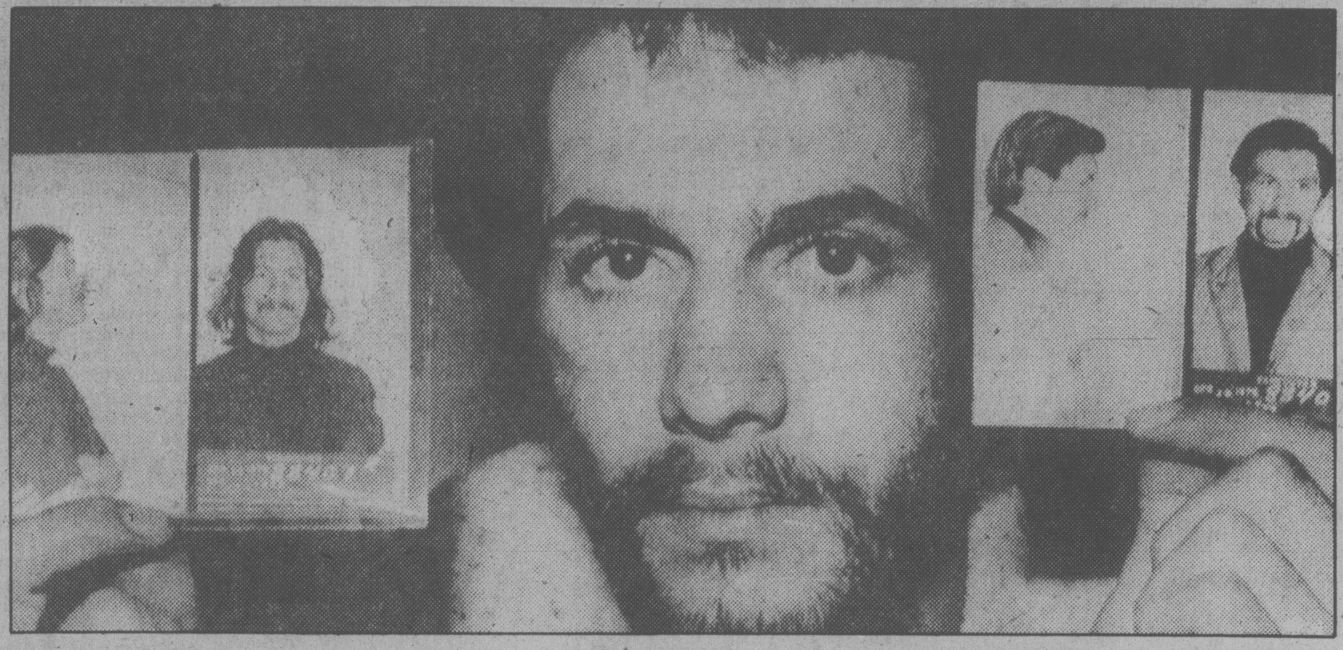
A cross-country survey of the big firms doing billions of dollars worth of business with the Arabs reveals all contracts signed and functioning before Clark took office have been honored, but not one new contract has been given, the paper said today.

It said major Canadian companies that fear the effects of a Middle East financial backlash include:

— Bell Canada, now in the second year of a five-year, $1.5-billion contract to help install a new phone system in Saudi Arabia;

— Atco Co. of Calgary, which has already provided hundreds of millions of dollars worth of prefabricated housing, and is reported to have already lost $10 million worth of contracts;

— De Havilland of Toronto, Canadair of Montreal and Litton Systems of Toronto, with a total of $4 billion worth of contracts in the Middle East.



Judge called three assailants human 'animals,' Groulx, with mugshots, is bitter only one got life

He will never forgive them

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jacques Lionel Groulx saw the straight razor dipping to slash his body, felt the pain, and he wondered if the men would ever stop hurting him.

But he says he never — even as he began to lose consciousness — believed that he was going to die.

The fear of dying came later for the 20-year-old Canadian Armed Forces private — in the weeks he lay in hospital, more dead than alive, staring at the ceiling and reliving every detail of the night he was tortured and flung down a railroad ravine.

Rev. Bob Gagnon of Canadian Forces Base Chilliwack was with Groulx during his fight for life.

"Father, all I can tell you is that he's still breathing . . . that's all I can say," a doctor at Vancouver General Hospital told Gagnon after a CNR engineer found Groulx unconscious on the railroad tracks.

"Come on my buddy, you've got to come out of this, you've got to make it," Gagnon remembers coaxing Groulx.

But at first, Groulx saw no reason to stay alive, and the priest says he understands why.

The attempted killing of Groulx on June 30, 1978, was called by county court Judge Thomas Fisher "a product of a malignant mind . . . a sickening and tragic commentary on human behavior."

The ordeal started when Groulx sought to buy some hashish in Vancouver's Gastown area and ended in a frightening, bizarre ordeal in which he was cut 15 times with a straight razor, repeatedly punched and kicked between the legs and in the face and forced to perform oral sex on his tormentors.

Then he was pitched over a railway bridge only to make what was described in court as a miraculous survival.

As a result of the incident, Fisher sentenced Richard (Gypsy) Higgins, 23, earlier this week to life imprisonment for attempted murder, Victor (Buck) Sharma, 20, to 15 years for attempted murder, and Stewart Grant, 20, who "played a lesser role," to three years.

"I'm not a psychologist, but these men have problems," said Groulx, now 21, who lives with his parents while looking for work as a plumber — the trade he learned in the army. He received a medical discharge in February.

"Prison is the best place for Higgins and I hope he never gets out. He should spend the rest of his life locked up where he will never hurt anyone else as he has me. And Sharma? I feel the same way — even Grant — they knew what they were doing to me. They are animals, three crazies."

Groulx now walks with a permanent limp from a shattered heel, suffers back pains and has chest and stomach problems. His body is scarred and he says it is too soon to be sure if his psyche has survived intact. He thinks about the nightmare often.

"The whole time it was happening . . . I thought they would keep me in that house forever . . . I clung to thoughts of my mother and father, my friends, and I kept asking myself what kind of human beings could be doing this to me. I kept asking 'Why? Why?' and I was half-dead you know.

"Do you understand — I won't let it destroy my life. I will try to keep a positive attitude because nobody can change the past . . . but I will never forget and I will never forgive.

"When I saw them in court during the trial (in June) I felt sick to my stomach, like I was going to throw up. And if I ever saw one of them again, even in the street, I couldn't stand it.

"It would bring back the most horrible, the most disgusting thing in my whole life . . . like it was happening to me all over again."

Torch trial clears Verigin

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Orthodox Doukhobor leader John J. Verigin was found not guilty today on three charges of conspiracy to commit arson. A fourth count was stayed earlier in the week-long trial.

The nine-man, three-woman jury also found William F. Evdokimoff, 61, of the Nelson area not guilty on the one count he faced. Peter Astaforoff of Gilpin, B.C., was convicted on the two counts of conspiracy to commit arson with which he was charged.

The audience of about 100 Doukhobors released a collective gasp of relief as the jury foreman said it had found Verigin, 58, not guilty on the first count. Men and women in the audience began to cry as the not guilty verdicts were returned on all three counts.

After the jury had finished giving the verdict, Verigin's wife Laura walked across the courtroom and they embraced and kissed.

As the jury left the courtroom, after being dismissed by Judge David Campbell of Vancouver, Verigin rose and bowed to them.

Lawyer William Firman of Vancouver, who had represented Evdokimoff, asked that Astaforoff be remanded to Vancouver for sentencing because Astaforoff, who had represented himself during the trial, wanted a lawyer to speak to sentencing.

Shortly before the jury returned with its verdict, an elderly man and woman began singing hymns in Russian outside the courtroom, then stripped. They were arrested by police.

On Friday, about 100 Doukhobors maintained a quiet vigil in the cramped courtroom gallery.

During the evening about 800 members of the Union of Spiritual Communities of Christ — the orthodox sect Verigin leads — waited in vain at what supporters hoped would have been a victory rally at the Brilliant Cultural centre near Castlegar.

The stoic courtroom wait was shattered before noon when about a dozen Sons of Freedom women standing in the hall outside the second floor courtroom began singing hymns in Russian and began to strip.

They were propelled downstairs to the lobby by sheriff's deputies.

After the deputies had gathered all the demonstrators in the main lobby, they escorted them outside where the singing and nudity drew a crowd of serious-looking Doukhobors and snickering non-Doukhobors.

Thirteen women and two men were being held in custody. No charges have been laid.

Mushroom war resumes

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Fungus fanciers on the Queen Charlotte Islands were once again fair game for the RCMP on Friday after the Crown moved to close a two-day legal lapse which permitted possession of the illegal psilocybe mushroom.

The federal justice department decided Thursday that it would appeal a Prince Rupert country court decision that possession was no crime.

In the meantime the RCMP has been instructed to continue laying charges for trial after the appeal has been heard.

Two juvenile robbers to go free?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two youths sentenced to jail terms last week might go free because there are no vacancies at British Columbia's youth detention centres.

The two 16-year-olds, sentenced in Powell River to nine months in jail for crimes including a $50,000 robbery, are the first to be returned to court where a judge will decide next week what to do with them.

The alternatives as permitted by the Juvenile Delinquents Act are probation, a fine, or the placing of the youths in the care of the human resources ministry.

Or the court could simply release the boys.

"They could just throw up their hands and say, 'If the attorney-general doesn't want to do anything with them, why should we?' " said Crown counsel Eric Chesterley.

Juvenile authorities say the decision to return the youths to court is bound to infuriate some judges and rock the province's juvenile containment program.

One of the two youths has 15 convictions for breaking and entering and an additional record for theft; the other, since the age of 13, has chalked up 21 breaking and entering convictions and one for possession of a narcotic.

A week after they were sentenced to nine months at the Willingdon youth detention centre in Burnaby, family court in Powell River was notified the boys were being returned to court.

An accompanying note, signed by Willingdon's director, read: "Admittance has been denied on the grounds that it would be contrary to the official designated capacity of 20."

Peter Insley, a solicitor with the attorney-general's criminal justice division, said two other youths are also being taken back to court because detention centres have no other choice when they reach their limit.

"Once the inn is full, that's it," he said.

There is normally room for 90 young offenders in the province's detention centres — 20 at Willingdon, 10 at Victoria's detention centre and 30 at each of two forest camps. But the Victoria centre has been closed for two months for renovations and will not reopen until Oct. 1.

Les Boon, probation officer and co-ordinator of programming at Willingdon, said the young residents and staff suffer from chronic, severe overcrowding.

In addition to the 20 youths serving sentences there, Willingdon must open its

Snags foul war against L.A. smog

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Smog reached such hazardous levels in Southern California this week because of a freak weather condition and because every major strategy devised to combat air pollution in recent years has run into unforeseen snags.

The best laid plans of smog officials are a study in high flying optimism gone aground. For example:

— Cars were outfitted with catalytic converters to trap tailpipe emissions, a major smog source. But the devices deteriorate far more rapidly than expected and are easily "poisoned."

— Hundreds of rules have been adopted since 1948 to control emissions from factories and other stationary sources of pollution. But the local smog agency has only 75 inspectors to police 40,000 firms in the four-county South Coast Air Basin around Los Angeles. Besides, many rules have loopholes.

— In 1977 Congress enacted "let's get tough" amendments to the Clean Air Act. But timetables set for cleaning the air have been attacked — and in some cases delayed — by industry, which argues that Congress did not understand the economic costs involved.

— While cars use fuel more efficiently and industrial emissions are down every year, thousands of newcomers pour into Southern California each year — wiping out the progress. More people drive more cars more miles than ever before in Southern California and the numbers are increasing.

Meanwhile, a growing breeze Friday began pushing the yellow-brown smog out of the inland valleys east of Los Angeles and across the choking city toward the sea — just in time to deliver a dose to smog fugitives fleeing to the beaches.

Temperatures were expected to climb, but the South Coast Air Quality Management District said that the heat and air movement might combine to provide a good chance that an inversion layer trapping the smog might break and belch the lung-searing air away.

When freak weather systems descend on the region, pollutants accumulate. The same pollutants are put into the air every day of the year in similar quantities. But some days — or weeks as just now — the pollutants build up, slosh slowly around and make everyone uncomfortable, even sick.

For instance, an unusual shift in summertime weather patterns over the northwestern Pacific appears to be the dominant cause of the current smog siege, meteorologists say.

Dr. Jerome Namias, a research meteorologist at the University of California, San Diego, said that the persistent inversion layer — a blanket of warm air what has trapped pollutants in the Los Angeles Basin stems from a major westward shift of the Pacific high-pressure area that normally dominates summertime weather patterns over a vast area of the North Pacific and coastal United States.

The Pacific high is also significantly weaker than usual.

As the Pacific high weakened and moved west earlier this summer, a continental high-pressure system that usually hovers over the Arizona desert slid west over California, Namias said.

This movement of the desert high in turn produced a downward flow of air — and a consequent warming — that created an unusually persistent inversion layer over the area. An inversion layer is a blanket of stagnant warm air that effectively traps pollutants beneath it.

Ordinarily the Pacific high, which rotates in a clockwise direction, carries relatively cool northern air down along the coast that helps flush pollutants from the urban atmosphere.

"Of course the source of the smog is automobiles," Namias said. "But I think the most important factor (in current conditions) is the weather."

The smog values this week are no surprise, said smog agency meteorologist Art Davidson. "The levels are what you'd expect with this weather. Fortunately it happens only once every 10 to 15 years."

doors to any juveniles remanded in custody for court appearances.

Boon said the centre's official capacity is 55 but actual numbers are higher about two-thirds of the time.

"We were up to 72 last week," he said. "As our numbers increase, our ability to provide supervision and control diminishes."

Residents have to double up in cells. School programs cannot cope with the overcrowding, so some residents don't go to school.

"I can't tell you how frustrating it is for staff," said Boon.

He said he is glad to see the issue of overcrowding come to a head because it will force B.C. to look at the number of juvenile offenders being locked up who would be better off in community programs.

"There are kids who don't belong here," he said. "There is considerable public pressure to deal with juveniles away from the community. And that's unfortunate because the community ultimately has the most help to offer them."

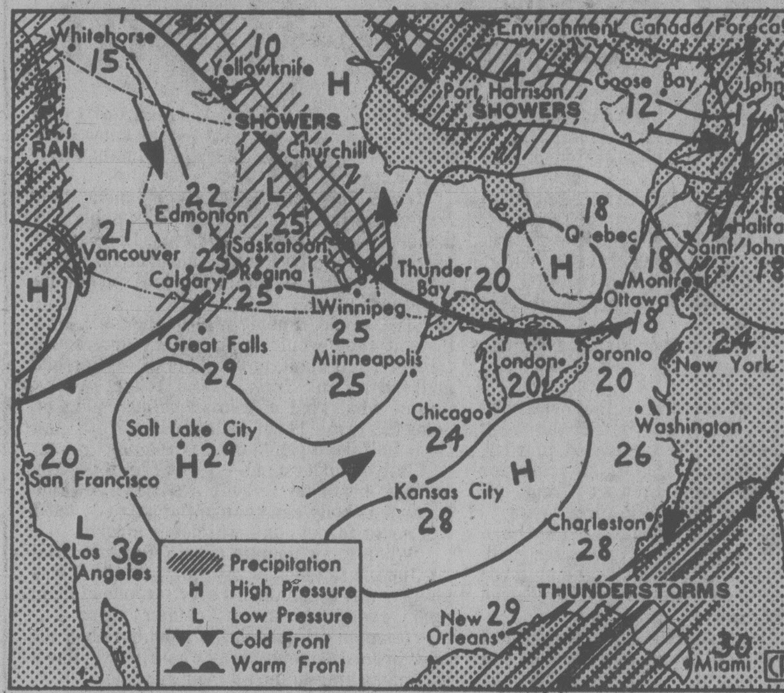
The Weather



Map valid until noon Sunday

A frontal system continues to move very slowly southeastwards but is weakening as it does so. It will trigger a few showers or thundershowers in the central interior today and Sunday but should give little if any precipitation on the south coast when it arrives on Sunday. The system will end the current warm spell which saw temperatures rise to 30 degrees or more at several cities on Friday.

Ben skips ding

LONDON (AP) — Engineers hurried to Big Ben today when the famous clock towering over Westminster struck a wrong chord and lost its first note. It struck dong-ding-dong, instead of ding-dong-ding-dong.

The strange sound was noticed in the quarter-hour chimes preceding its 11 a.m. signal.

"We don't know the explanation yet and otherwise the clock is going normally," said an environment department official.

Big Ben was named after Sir Benjamin Hall, commissioner of works when the clock was made in 1858. It was last stopped in March, 1978, for maintenance.

Get well cards poured in from all over the country in 1976 when the clock's chiming mechanism failed.

Ottawa ducks sex-ad laws

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The federal government wants British Columbia newspapers to publish a "Help Wanted Male" classified advertisement.

Provincial human rights regulations forbid employers other than the federal government from publishing newspaper advertisements which discriminate on the basis of sex.

The ad for prison guards at the Kent maximum security prison and the Mission medium security prison, both in the Fraser Valley, ran in Thursday's edition of the Columbian here and the Province in Vancouver.

It ran with general employment opportunities advertisements, but it began: "This competition is open to male residents of the province of British Columbia."

Allan Anderson, a human rights branch officer, said the B.C. code does not apply to the federal government, but pointed out that the Mission prison already employs female guards.

"I'm surprised that they're still restricting the job to males," he said.

Federal hiring regulations also prohibit sex discrimination, but Richard Menzel, director of the Public Service Commission, said a special exemption was gained in this case.

He said the employment of 10 female guards at Mission is a pilot project and no more women will be hired until the project is completed and evaluated.

Indians vow to stay on reserve village

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the Blueberry Indian band, forced to flee their reserve near Fort St. John because of toxic gas leaks from nearby natural gas and oil wells, will not bow to pressure to move their village, says the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs.

An Indian affairs department spokesman said Aug. 20 the department was considering relocating the band's village to another site on the reserve, about 65 kilometres north of the northern B.C. community.

A Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs news release Friday said the department is seriously confused if it believes the band is going ahead with village relocation plans now.

The release said union president George Manuel has told Indian affairs that the band "has no intention of bowing to press, company or government pressure to relocate the village."

About 90 band members fled the village July 16 after a pipe at the head of one of four wells operated by Kildonan Oil Ltd. spewed a cloud of toxic hydrogen sulphide over the reserve.

Eight band members — most of them children — were treated in hospital after the leak.

The band, which has moved back and forth to bush camps away from the four well sites, obtained a B.C. Supreme Court injunction Sept. 7, stopping Kildonan from resuming full operations until tests on the wells by federal officials are assessed.

Epp suddenly cancels visit with B.C. Indians

VANCOUVER (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jake Epp cancelled a visit to British Columbia Friday as Indian groups were making arrangements to discuss their problems with him.

Epp was scheduled to meet north coast tribal groups in Prince Rupert on Monday to discuss land claims and to discuss the Fraser River salmon fishing controversy with the Fountain Indian band in Vancouver on Tuesday.

Epp's office said the minister could not make the trip on the dates arranged.

The Fountain band has asked him to intercede in its dispute with federal fisheries officers that led to arrests of band members on charges of fishing during conservation closures near Lillooet.

On Thursday, fisheries officials said that Progressive Conservative MP Lorne Greenaway had been charged with obstructing fisheries officers in connection with the arrests.

Dam brings fine

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Dawson Construction Ltd. of Vancouver was fined $3,000 in provincial court here Friday for damaging a fish habitat.

An agent for the company pleaded guilty to the charge, which under the federal Fisheries Act carries a maximum penalty of $5,000.

Bear Creek, about 150 kilometres north of this central British Columbia city, was damaged Aug. 21, 1978 when Dawson built a dam so water would be readily available to wet down the road it was building.

The dam affected trout which were attempting to spawn.

UIC cuts opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia teachers are opposed to any reductions in unemployment insurance payments to sick or pregnant workers, says the head of the B.C. Teachers Federation.

Al Blakey, president of the group which represents 28,000 teachers, says in a telegram Friday to federal Manpower Minister Ron Atkey that maternity benefits should be made more readily available rather than cut.

Blakey was responding to suggested changes in the unemployment insurance program.

Rail pickets to go

VANCOUVER (UPC) — The British Columbia Supreme Court has approved an injunction application to stop workers of Placer Development's Endako mine from picketing a B.C. Rail spur line.

B.C. Rail spokesman Hugh Armstrong said Friday the court issued an order restraining the pickets from further trespassing. He said the railway expected operations on the Gibraltar spur line to return to normal.

Co-operate on salmon

Indian people demanding improved food fishing rights on B.C. salmon rivers should co-operate with the federal fisheries department in establishing conservation measures.

This summer the Fountain Indian Band made headlines by confronting federal fisheries officials trying to enforce fishing closures to ensure escapment quotas. Five Indians have been charged with fishing illegally. Greenway has been charged with obstructing officers.

The Fraser River salmon run is not the only one in dispute between fisheries and Indians. The upper reaches of the Skeena River and the Cowichan River have witnessed ugly scenes of confrontation over conservation regulations.

The Fountain Band leaders argue that because the Fraser runs through their reservation, Indian food fishing rights take precedence over federal regulations. That is a contention so far not supported in law. The Supreme Court of Canada this summer dismissed an appeal by the Cowichan Indians who claimed a right to fish regardless of conservation measures.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin said the band did not have any aboriginal title or treaty to back the claim. Laskin said that even if fishing rights claimed were established, they would have properly been subordinated to conservation of fisheries in particular rivers.

Indians may yet attain the rights they demand through land claims negotiations or through a successful Supreme Court argument. They might even realize, with good cause, a change in the Fisheries Act to allow Indians limited commercial fishing operations on the rivers. But until that happens, it is self-defeating not to co-operate with the regulatory body charged with managing and preserving fish stocks.

The Fountain Indians say they can better practise conservation by following traditional ways. That's doubtful. Traditionally the Indian didn't have to worry about the sport and commercial interests on the coast. They now have little hope of gathering from the other sectors the information needed for conservation.

The fisheries department has asked the 92 Indian bands along the Fraser River to provide it with estimates of the amount of fish they need for food. Only one has co-operated. The Fountain Indians say they don't want quotas. They say they want regulations on the sport and commercial fishermen before they talk.

The fact is, both the sport and commercial fishermen are saddled with quotas. Whether it's daily catch limits, coast wide catch allowances, gear and licence limitations, or restricted openings, they don't escape conservation regulations.

Without catch quotas negotiated between the Indians and the fisheries department, the department has no alternative but to impose restricted opening on the Indian food fishermen. Surely, until aboriginal rights and land claims are settled, Indians band leaders along B.C. rivers can adequately predict the salmon food needs of their members.

The department already says that Indian food requirments, which at the moment are only estimates, are allocated before quota decisions are imposed on other users of the resource. It seems Indian food fishermen are already one step ahead.

UVic Forum

Charisma round the world

By Richard Powers

Richard Powers is professor of political science at the University of Victoria and co-ordinator of UVic Forum. UVic Forum is a co-operative project between the University of Victoria and the Victoria Times.

Today's column marks the beginning of an experiment between the Victoria Times and the University of Victoria. Each Saturday this space will be given over to individuals from the university as a vehicle to express their views and opinions or to share their knowledge and experience. There is virtually no limit to the breadth of subjects to be addressed. All opinions or statements of fact will be the sole responsibility of the author, but no one point of view or ideology will predominate.

Readers are invited to suggest subjects or raise issues they would like to see discussed in this column. We, in turn, will canvass the resources of the University to attempt to find a qualified individual who would like to respond to the best of these suggestions. All suggestions should be sent to the UVic Formu, c/o Victoria Times, Box 300, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria V8W 2N4.

The following thoughts which, because of the diversity of ideas with which this column will deal, cannot be called representative are, at least, illustrative of the shape of things to come.

On leaders

Joe Clark is a fine young man. He is attractive, intelligent and, without doubt, ambitious. He wants to do good — perhaps even great — things for his country. He is new to office but has already been to two important gatherings, in Japan and Africa. He has a charming, capable wife who, by most accounts, is committed to his career. He would like to penetrate the reaches of Quebec, achieve a majority government and lead the nation for some years. He hasn't a chance.

Jimmy Carter is an older hand at the job. He too is intelligent and, without question, sincere. He was not a fixture in the federal government but instead promised — and still does promise — to be an alternative to the old ways of doing things. He has made real progress in world politics, especially in the Middle East, and he is married to an attractive and intelligent woman who shares his sense of mission. He would like to be renominated, unite his party and win reelection to another term. He hasn't a prayer.

The Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is an older man, less physically attractive than the other two. He is a religious leader, has been a political exile and gained power not through the ballot box but as the result of a popular uprising in his name. He is a loner and anything but cosmopolitan; still he works long hours and displays a genuine sense of dedication. He wants to make Iran an orthodox Islamic republic. Reports of his imminent political demise are accelerating. He may prosper.

What is it then that prompts this comparison, yet sets Clark and Carter off from the Ayatollah? The common feature, the distinguishing mark, of all three leaders is a flagrant — almost purposeful — lack of any sense of humor. (Both Clark and Carter smile a lot but that's not really the same thing.) And with this trait goes an egregious absence of perspective. Everything, no matter how absurd, must be taken as deadly serious, the adverb being doubly apt in the case of the Ayatollah.

That which joins Clark and Carter (aside from their common initials) and contrasts with the Ayatollah is the nature of their societies. If the two Western leaders lived in the 16th Century and had ambitions to transform their domains into some grave theocracy along the lines of the Ayatollah's plan for Iran (Calvin's Geneva comes to mind), they could hardly be better equipped. A Pierre Trudeau or a John Kenndy would be completely outclassed in this kind of competition. Then the staid, dour, "no-laughing-matter" approach that all three men project would translate for Clark and Carter, as it does for the Ayatollah, into an aura of charisma. As things are it makes the two younger men seem vapid and, dare one say it, witless.

All three leaders, although in different ways and to different degrees, were popularly chosen by their constituents. But what passes for charisma and virtue in the one culture comes off as homeliness, even despondency, in the others. One hardly has to wish that the Prime Minister were a born master of ceremonies or the President a stand-up comic to regret the mirthless laugh, the glum sameness, the awful sincerity that is the trademark of Joe Clark and Jimmy Carter.

Geoffrey Stevens

Money down the drain

Geoffrey Stevens is Ottawa columnist for the Globe and Mail., Toronto.

OTTAWA — Would you answer a question?

By any chance, did you purchase a copy of a book, published in 1977 by the Goverhment of Canada, entitled, Taxonomy of Upper Jurassic-Lower Cretaceous Microplankton? I'm serious. The book is for real. It was prepared by the Geological Survey of Canada and was ofered for sale, nationwide, at a price of $4 by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre (a division of the Department of Supply and Services).

If you bought a coy, you were one of precisely 54 Canadians who did. Another 165 were given away free out of a printing of 600 copies.

Why, you may ask, would the government of 23 million people bother to publish a book for a market of just 54? That's a good question.

Why didn't anyone say, "Wait. No, we're not going to publish this book. There's no demand for it"? That's a good question.

How much money is Ottawa wasting by publishing books, reports and periodicals that no one will read, let alone pay for? That's a very, very good question. No one knows much much the government wastes on publishing for the simple reason that no one — not a soul — has the faintest idea how much the government spends on publishing.

No one says wait

This much is know. Ninety-two per cent of federal publishing passes through the nads of the department of supply and services. DSS has an annual printin bill of $150 million (in the 1978-79 fiscal year, printing in the government's own plants cost $56.5 million; another $92.9 million was contracted out to commercial printers). On its fully priced publications (those which are not given away free or sold at a subsidized price), Supply and Services uses a formula of 4.5 to 1. If it costs $1 to print one copy of a publication, the list price should be at least $4.50 to recover costs. The other $3.50 is for such things as distribution, handling, promotion and discounts to bookstores.

Applied across the board to the $150 million printing outlay, the formula would produce a publishing cost figure of $675 million. But Supply and Services says a formula of 6 to 1 would be more realistic. That would make it $900 million.

But that's too high because the $150 million printing bill covers government forms, including income tax returns, for which there are no marketing expenses. On the other hand, it's too low because it contains no provisions for the salaries and other costs of all the civil servants (or contract employees) who do the research and write the manuscripts. Using some yardsticks employed by commercial publishers, Ottawa's total annual publishing expenditure could be as high as $1.5 billion. "It would probably take 20 man-years to figure it out," says a Privy Council Office official, only a trifle hyperbolically.

Discourages vanity

It may never be figured out accurately. The Publishing Centre tries to make sure that publications are produced economically. It discourages "vanity" publishing (it didn't stop Taxonomy of Upper Jurassic, etc., but it did talk Environment Canada out of publishing a book on how to measure the amount of carbon between the bark and the trunk of a tree). But, in the final analysis, publishing authority rests with the individual departments and agencies. If they have the funds, they can go ahead.

The right to publish is a jealously guarded prerogative of departments and agencies. Some of it, including annual reports, is required by law. Much of it is entirely legitimate. But a large portion of the discretionary publishing is money down the drain. It's spent less to inform the public than to glorify the department or its ministers to placate scientists and other government researchers who feel they will perish if they don't publish, or simply to keep idel civil service hands busy.

Will right man for mayor please stand

Nine weeks from today, the voters of Victoria will choose a new mayor.

The campaign to choose a new mayor already shows signs of being an odd one. Officially it has barely begun: Ald. John Hayes, who has been trying to make up his mind for months whether to run, Friday became the first candidate to declare his intentions formally, closely followed by Ald. Murray Glazier and Bill Tindall. Unofficially, it has been going on for the past two years: during the aldermanic elections of 1977, both Tindall and Glazier (along with a couple of other contestants who are now non-contenders) noted their plans to try for the mayor's chair after Mike Young stepped down.

A three-way race between Tindall, Glazier and Hayes would be an interesting and hard-fought battle. Yet the feeling is growing in Victoria that no matter which ended up victorious, he might not be exactly the right man for the job.

Tindall would follow in Young's footsteps as a careful, solid administrator. The city would be unlikely to get into any serious trouble under his stewardship. Would he, however, provide dynamic leadership to develop Victoria as a unique city, to maintain its heritage while still improving the economy?

Glazier has been quite clear about what he doesn't want for the city — office buildings along the waterfront, rashes of apartments and townhouses in the neighborhoods. He has not, however, been so clear about what he does want. Moreover, one must wonder if he has so alienated nearly every other politician in the Capital Region that it would be almost impossible for him to get anything accomplished.

Of the three, Hayes probably has the best vision of where the city should go in the next few years, the most innovative ideas about how a new mayor might tackle his responsibilities. Perhaps because of lack of time to devote to his aldermanic duties, his performance on council, however, has not shown conclusively that he has the assertiveness and political skills to put his ideas into action.

Something more is needed.

Victorians look back fondly on the days when Peter Pollen was mayor. It was not that Pollen was a perfect mayor. His irascibility, his erratic manner, his bulldozer-like tactics often angered and frustrated those with whom he came in contact.

Pollen's great strength, however, was that he had a crystal-clear vision of what Victoria could become and an ability to communicate that vision to the community. With Pollen as mayor, Victorians began to believe in the unique potential of Victoria. They began to believe that Victoria didn't have to go the way of other North American cities, didn't have to suffer urban blight, didn't have to be beset with highrises and demolitions and skidroads.

Much of the legacy of that vision remains with the city. It remains in single-family housing in James Bay, in public access to the waterfront, in a downtown that preserves the buildings of the 19th century.

But much of it is also being lost — not in great chunks, but in tiny nibbles — a modern bank tower on Fort Street here, a patch of new townhouses there. It is lost because neither city council nor the city residents seem to have any longer that shining overall vision of a direction for Victoria for the next 10, 20, or 50 years.

Pollen himself has been telling friends privately that he is not interested in running for the mayor's chair again. He might still be persuaded to change his mind, but that might raise a perplexing if arguable thought. His vision, perfect to meet the challenges of the 1970s, might not be the best one for the next decade and the years beyond.

One of the current candidates or a surprise dark horse would serve Victoria and its residents well by showing quickly that he or she has a dynamic vision for the 1980s and the skills to translate that vision into action.

Living in the age of expendability

It was a perfect weekend for generation watchers at Forest Hills. There, in less than 48 hours, Billie Jean King, 35, was beaten by Chris Evert Lloyd, 24, who was then beaten by Tracy Austin, 16.

Chrissie put the whole thing into perspective when she benignly patted her teen-age victor on the head.

I couldn't help noticing that Tracy Austin displayed an utterly uncomplicated determination to get into first place, to become number one. Nor could I help noticing the crowd. It changed allegiances, sided with the contender, grew more and more excited at the prospect of unseating a champion and crowning a new one.

The whole thing reminded me of a suspicion I've had for some time: that sports contests have become a kind of model for the rest of our culture. No, I am not just talking about winners and losers. I'm talking about living in the age of expendability.

Not long ago, in discussing this with friends, we came up with the wry notion that if you become truly successful in America you have two options: You can die immediately or become a has-been.

This is not exactly a comfort to the contenders, but there you are. Our country markets has-beens as if we were doing piece-rate work for the manufacturers of Trivia games. We churn out Golden Oldies and Where Are They Nows.

Andy Warhol — another Golden Oldie — once said that someday everyone in America would be famous for ten minutes. He was wrong. But someday, at this rate, no one will be number one for more than 10 minutes.

It's easy to understand why athletes are replaced like new parts. They're in a business that depends on the human body. But it is less clear why this happens in fields that depend on the mind, talent, or even, for heaven's sakes, experience. And I wonder if it doesn't have something to do with sales.

People have become our products. The "stars" — whether they are athletic or political, literary people or entertainers — are marketed and marketeers, hustled and hustlers.

It doesn't take a whole evening in front of the tube to see that brewers are selling ball players, not beer. Similarly, in Hollywood, the industry wants to sell stars, not movies. In most places, they still force theatre owners to bid on movies blind — without seeing much more than the cast.

Meanwhile, in New York, the publishing people are selling authors, not novels. They push "a" Taylor Caldwell or "a" Robin Cook, a by-line and not necessarily a product.

In politics, of course, they package.

We know all this, but what we don't know is that there may be an inverse relationship between exposure and endurance, publicity and productivity, selling and sales credibility. The natural obsolescence of an athlete becomes the built-in obsolescence of every Number One.

Admittedly it takes a lot longer to master poltics than a two-handed backswing. There aren't many 16-year-old politicians in the wings. But, if you remember, less than four years ago Jimmy Carter was an unknown, and now we are told he is a washed-up. The man who made personality the sales issue complains now that no one pays attention to the real issues. He is paying for his sales campaign. He, too, looks expendable.

Norman Mailer once wrote that the "first art work of an artist is the shaping of his own personality." But the very public shaping of his own personality has warped Mailer's art.

To a certain extent it is our fault. We run most of our stars, like Joe Namath, and dump them when their knees go or our interest wanes. We devour their lives in People magazine and their talents on television and their time on talk shows.

We gobble them down like pistachio nuts and throw away the shells. Then we demand more. We end up with 100 has-beens for every Carl Yastrzemski and 500 crashed starlets for every Katherin Hepburn.

I think we may just have too many mutually exploitive relationships with public people. We have too many one-night or one-season or one-term stands.

People have become our most expendable product. We have become cynical toward every salesperson and expect a quick turnover in the inventory of idea makers and problem solvers.

Today, even the eager contender may discover that success in America often takes the same course as an overhead smash.

Some of the Shah's tanks on parade before his regime fell . . . western arms-builders now in lurch

'England will expect every man to sell arms to foreign countries'

By ANTHONY SAMPSON

London Observer

After all the naval magnificence of Mountbatten's funeral, with the memories of heroic achievements, it is all the more distressing to see the Navy (following the Army last year) being dragged into the squalid business of flogging arms to the Third World.

In Portsmouth Lord Strathcona, the minister of state at the ministry of defence, opened what is called The Royal Naval Equipment Exhibition — the current newspeak for an Arms Fair. British companies, including such cosy high street names as Rank, General Electric, Decca, Lucas and Rolls-Royce, showed off the lethal side of their business to visiting military delegations, mostly from developing countries. Uniformed sailors and officers will do what they can to persuade foreign buyers to buy British guns, warships or electronic equipment: England will expect every man to do his duty, to sell arms to foreign countries.

There is nothing new about this kind of naval engagement. The argument that we need to sell to foreigners to keep up our own weapons industries goes back to at least a century ago, when Armstrong's in Newcastle sold battleships across the world because the Roal Navy couldn't keep them busy. In the Dardanelles in the First World War, British troops were fired on by guns made by Vickers.

The recession since 1974, together with the new wealth of oil-producing countries, produced the same kind of commercial pressures as the recession a century earlier, to sell weapons to keep business going; all navel ships were converted into floating showrooms to tote weapons round the world.

The arms companies have now increasingly taken over from the Services as the dynamic policy-makers — led by the electronics company Racal, which is one of the most spectacular growth companies on the Stock Exchange, half of whose profits come from military equipment. It is symptomatic of the new priorities that the former First Sea Lord, Sir Edward Ashmore, who comes from a long line of admirals, should recently have become a director of Racal, pacing the quarterdeck of an arms company.

What is new is not the Navy's collaboration, but the intensity of the arms trade and the growing awareness of its dangers. Two years ago, it was already becoming clear, particularly in America, that arms-selling to the Middle East was getting out of control: more than half the British exports went to a single country, Iran, and the trial of two Racal executives gave some hint of the extent of the corruption in Tehran.

Then came the Iranian revolution, which provided a case-history of the dangers of uncontrolled arms selling. It was clear that the Shah's huge orders for tanks, warships and planes had helped to destabilise rather than defend his regime: they had been at the expense of social necessities, like housing, hospitals or roads, and they had been surrounded by a mire of corruption which played a large role in the revolt against the Shah.

But the Iranian fiasco also showed the economic dangers of relying on exports which are so uncertain. The concellation of the Shah's orders left the tank-factories and shipyards in the lurch; and the Ayatollah, who has recently asked for more arms, can hardly be regarded as a much more secure or sensible customer. In the meantime the arms salesmen, with much surplus to dispose of, have been desperately pressing the Foreign Office to be allowed to sell tanks or warships to other controversial Middle Eastern regimes. The price of second-hand tanks — always a significant index in the arms-dealing world — has been sinking as Chieftains and second-hand Centurions flood the market.

The case of Iran has undermined some of the complacency about selling arms to the Third World, which tended to be based on two contradictory claims: that they were essential to defence, and that they were too sophisticated to be dangerous. But attempts to restrain Western arms sales have so far failed miserably. Where the Americans have held back, the Europeans have competed to move in with sales (for instance) to Ecuador and the Argentine, and they all look to China to fill some of the gap left by the Shah.

While the dangers at the receiving end have become more worrying, there has also been more evidence of the economic drawbacks of the arms trade to the exporting countries. Studies in the U.S. have suggested that in providing jobs, the arms business is much less satisfactory than other industries: partly because it is becoming much more capital-intensive, partly because it is so capricious. And the central argument that foreign sales help to subsidise domestic military production is increasingly questioned by the military themselves, all over Europe; for foreign orders not only often have quite different requirements to the home services; they can also provide their own threat to national security. As weapons move more freely round the world, it becomes much less easy to be sure that they will not eventually be used against the country which first sold them.

Of course it is always possible to justify arms selling on the basis of a general pessimism and contempt for all Third World countries: "If they want 'em, let 'em have 'em." There is enough evidence for pessimism, that instead of achieving their New International Economic Order, the developing countries are achieving a New International Military Order, in which their independence takes the form of freedom to arm themselves to the teeth; and there is some irony in the fact that the list of non-aligned countries assembled in Havana last week should be fairly close (with some exceptions like Cuba) to the list of 89 countries invited to the naval arms fair at Portsmouth.

But there is a world of difference between accepting the right of independent nations to arm themselves, and ruthlessly encouraging their militarization through arms fairs, floating showrooms and secret bribery, to make sure that they will provide long-term markets for weapons.

It thus remains tragic, for anyone with pride in naval traditions, to see them being exploited to sell weapons abroad, in the face of not only common morality, but strong evidence that it is against the true national interest. It will not be surprising if eventually British troops in Ulster find themselves being blown up by a device that was sold, through circuitous routes, by a British arms fair.

Letters to the editor

Expect complaints

No doubt you will receive a number of letters dealing with the many errors of both fact and logic contained in Douglas Fisher's three pieces on Canada's Native peoples.

His arguments against granting special legislative consideration to native people in the final analysis rest upon one deceptively simple proposition. It wasn't, after all, this generation of Indians whose way of life was smashed by a technologically more advanced invader. It wasn't Douglas Fisher (or you or me) who did it. And so, he complains, they have no particular claim upon us and we owe them nothing.

One thing bothers me. The land upon which our houses stand, which produces our food and our mineral wealth, was taken by force from its original inhabitants. Our standard of living, our comfortable life is the inheritance of that theft. But what have the native peoples inherited? — Alan D. Bowd, 1794 Midgard Avenue.

Retain original plan

Does the McKenzie Avenue extension really need to be built?

The last stand of mature white pine on the peninsula will be decimated to allow its construction and a sanctuary for wild life and thousands of birds will be endangered, but the real losers will be the residents of the entire area when a four-lane highway is thrust through a quiet residential area to service what the present road system does adequately.

The most tiresome part of the present discussions concern the deputation by the members of the Marigold Co-op to have the road moved 100 feet west between Carey and Interurban. As a resident of Phase 1 of Passmore Place on Daffodil Avenue on the opposite side of Swan Lake Creek to the Marigold Co-op and the Passmore townhouse complex, I would like to put forward some facts pertinent to this proposed relocation.

Purchasers of homes in Passmore place and Marigold Co-op received a layout plan from Dunhill Developments, showing the location of the proposed McKenzie extension in relation to their property, it being suggested by their representative that the road may proceed within the next five years or perhaps not at all.

We moved into 677 Daffodil Ave. (closest lot to McKenzie on the western side of the Passmore development) in Dec. '75 with this knowledge accepted, as I assume had the members of Marigold Co-op. I have just inspected the new alignment proposal at Saanich municipal hall and discover McKenzie has now moved 30 feet closer to me by appropriating additional lands from the properties backing onto McKenzie where the extension begins. Then, to accommodate the members of Marigold Co-op, instead of using the original road allowance provided in the planning, the road has been relocated 100 feet westward resulting in the appropriation of further properties including an existing house.

It would seem that to satisfy the few in Marigold Co-op, more families will be inconvenienced by this relocation, not to mention the considerable cost of appropriating more property where none was previously necessary.

The irony of all this comes through when you consider that as a parent and member of the McKenzie School Parents Association our request for a pedestrian overpass adjacent to the school at Carey Road and Mckenzie has fallen on deaf ears as being too costly to construct, yet a small group representing the Co-op can have the entire road relocated at enormous cost.

If this extension must be built then let it be built to the original plans and with the monies saved build an overpass for our children. — Jim Williams, 677 Daffodil Avenue.

Relieve indignation

Last week (Sept. 4, 5, and 6) you printed a series "Canada and It's Natives" by Douglas Fisher.

A feeling of indignation has gripped me and I would like to request that you give equal space to native representatives. If any readers would like to know about the hopes and aspirations of native people, as presented by them during the Northern Native Rights Campaign last March, they are invited to a public meeting on Wednesday, October 3 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Andrew's Church Hall, 1002 Pandora Avenue. Reverend Terry Anderson will be the speaker. — Mrs. Maria Neijmeijer, P. O. Box 4262, Stn. 'A', Victoria.

French upgrading

We would like to introduce your readers to Canadian Parents for French, an organization of volunteer parents from across Canada dedicated to the improvement of French second-language learning opportunities for their children.

The goals of our organization are three-fold: CPF believes that every Canadian child should have the opportunity to learn French to the level he or she is willing and able; that the best types of French language learning opportunities be available; and to this end, CPF maintains liason with governmental and educational authorities.

CPF acts as a resource for parents and educators. We can provide information on school programs, research, resource personnel, and extra curricular activities. We have assisted many parent groups in B.C. to obtain better French second-language programs in their schools. Four provincial and four national newsletters are sent out annually to keep members informed on the latest events and developments in French second-language learning opportunities.

If any of your readers are interested in our objectives and wish more information, we invite them to write to Canadian Parents for French, B.C. Chapter, 3250 Cornwall Street, Port Coquitlam, B.C. V3B 3G7. — Chris Evans, Publicity Chairman, B.C. Chapter, Canadian Parents for French.

CN reviewing hotels viability

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadian National is reviewing its entire hotel policy, including whether it should stay in the hotel business, says Robert A. Bandeen, CN's president and chief executive officer.

The CN president predicted domestic container shipping would boom in the next 10 or 15 years — and that, when it did, the railways could abandon uneconomical spur lines.

Thus far domestic shippers have been slow to adopt the idea, and today no more than one per cent of domestic traffic is by containers. CN tried to push domestic containerization about 10 years ago "but we got our fingers burned."

Marriages, births fall off

OTTAWA (CP) — There was a 1.3-per-cent drop in the birth rate and a 6.2-per-cent drop in the marriage rate for the 12-month period ending June 30, compared with the corresponding period one year earlier.

Statistics Canada reported Friday that the number of births in the 12-month period fell to 354,830 from 356,830 the previous year. The number of marriages dropped to 179,580 from 189,040.

All provinces except Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan and Alberta reported drops in the birth rate. The marriage rate declined in every province, with drops of more than 10 per cent reported by New Brunswick and Manitoba.

During the 12-month period, there were 7.6 marriages per 1,000 Canadians and 15 births per thousand.

Hash gang's ringleader gets 18 years

TORONTO (CP) — The leader of a $3-million hashish smuggling racket was sentenced in county court Friday to 18 years in jail and four accomplices were sentenced to jail terms ranging from two years less a day to 12 years.

Federal prosecutor Michael Dambrot said in an interview he believed the 18-year sentence was the largest ever imposed in Canada for a cannabis case.

The previous maximum was 15 years, he said, although people have been jailed for life for smuggling heroin.

Judge Ian Cartwright said the smuggling operation, which brought 280 kilograms of hashish into Canada from India, was a "slick and sophisticated crime executed with military precision in a cold, calculated design to reap enormous profit for these criminals at the expense of their fellow human beings."

Less than three hours after their sentencing, an appeal court judge granted the men bail ranging from $2,000 to $75,000 pending appeals on conviction.

Dov Orenstein, 37, of Toronto who was described by the judge as the ringleader, got 18 years in penitentiary for possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficking.

Gustav Shapiro, 48, of Toronto termed the field commander of the five-man ring, was sentenced to 12 years for the same offence.

Three other Toronto men were convicted of the lesser charge of simple possession of hashish.

Gershon (Gary) Levin, 37, got four years in prison and the Crown is appealing his acquittal by a jury of the more serious charge of trafficking.

The judge recommended that Levin be deported from Canada back to Israel. He said Levin was picking up his last drug shipment on May 25, 1978 and missed his appointment at citizenship court.

Moshe Ferendaru, 44, was sentenced to 2½ years for possession and Hain Sabbagh, 43, a fringe participant, was sentenced to the maximum reformatory sentence of two years less a day.

Sabbagh was once an Israeli policeman and "his acquiescence in this crime is even more disturbing in light of his previous law enforcement responsibility in Israel," Cartwright said.

During a long trial earlier this year there was evidence that the drugs were shipped, concealed in 100 hollowed-out fork-lift wheels.

3 of 4 carburetors faulty

WINNIPEG (CP) — Government tests over the last week found that three out of four carburetors inspected were adjusted to improper air-fuel mixture, meaning fuel wastage and unnecessary air pollution.

John Polak of Environment Canada said Friday the results can only mean the maladjusted carburetors were altered by someone after they left the manufacturer because adjustments do not slip with wear and tear.

"I'm not trying to point a finger at anyone but it has to be done deliberately at some point," said Polak.

"They leave the factory with limitor caps that limit adjustment of the carburetor and I don't think we've seen more than four of those caps this week."

He said the results on the 400 cars tested were "exactly the same" as those found recently in Halifax, Calgary and Edmonton.

The carburetors could be altered by dealers or mechanics who believe a richer mixture makes a smoother running car and happier customer, he said. Or it could be done by the owners themselves.

But the richer mixture feeds more gas and less air into the engine. Less fuel is burned and more carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons enter the air.

The five-day test was a joint project of the federal and provincial pollution control departments.

Return of RCAF proposed

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Delegates to the national convention of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association have voted to ask the federal government to bring back the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The delegates voted unanimously Friday to request that the government consider re-establishing the RCAF as a separate entity within the Canadian armed forces.

The air force lost its separate identity through unification of the armed forces 11 years ago.

The loss of air force traditions and the service's distinctive blue uniform is a highly-emotional issue for members of the association.

Delegates requested that Defence Minister Allan McKinnon add an extra member to a study group recently appointed to examine unification of the forces.

McKinnon named a five-member group to study the unification issue earlier this month. A report is to be submitted by the end of January.

About 300 delegates from across Canada are attending the 15,000-member association's convention.

Chileans relent

MONTREAL (CP) — Chileans in 56 cities around the world have decided to end a 10-day hunger strike after obtaining a promise from the Chilean government that the bodies of 15 executed peasants will be returned to their families, a group of protesters said here Wednesday.

Supreme court may serve crow to PQ

MONTREAL (CP) — The Parti Quebecois government appears to be ready to eat some crow and pass English versions of more than 200 laws approved by the legislature in French only during the past two years, knowledgeable legal sources say.

The move would become necessary if the Supreme Court of Canada strikes down clauses on the language of legislation in Bill 101 — Quebec's controversial French language charter.

Swift legislative action would be needed to prevent courts from suspending enforcement of laws passed in French, but not English.

At stake in the Supreme Court ruling, is Bill 101's requirement that only the "official" French versions of laws be adopted by the national assembly.

Publication of unofficial English texts is provided for, so the assembly has continued its tradition of producing English translations of all laws. But since the language charter was enacted in August, 1977, no English text has actually been adopted by the legislature.

This has already been ruled unconstitutional by eight Quebec judges, including Chief Justice Jules Deschenes of Superior Court and a seven-judge bench of the Court of Appeal.

The French-only requirement, they reasoned, conflicts directly with Section 133 of the British North America Act, which provides that both languages be used in all records, journals and acts of the Quebec and federal legislatures.

The Supreme Court is expected to hand down its judgment within a few months, December at the latest.

Acid rain kills 5,000 a year

CHALK RIVER, Ont. (CP) — An American environmentalism says acid pollution kills an estimated 5,000 persons in Eastern Canada every year.

Dr. Leonard Hamilton, head of the environmental assessment division of the Brookhaven National Labratory in New York, said Thursday that the pollution also sterilizes thousands of Ontario lakes when it falls as rain "and poses a very serious health hazard for North Americans."

He said a survey taken in the United States showed acid pollution levels from coal-fired power stations as high as 10 to 20 micograms in every cubic metre of air in the Eastern U.S.

There was no reason to think levels in Eastern Canada were any lower, Hamilton said.

Alta. CNIB 'using' blind: United Way

EDMONTON (CP) — United Way officials may drop the Canadian National Institute for the Blind from its membership because of accusations CNIB is using the blind for cheap labor, United Way board member Reg Basken said Friday.

"If we drop CNIB, I hope the community says CNIB doesn't deserve to exist, and looks elsewhere in the social services spectrum for services to the blind," Basken said.

He said the issue would be discussed at a United Way executive meeting Tuesday.

"I feel there is a serious question of credibility with CNIB, and CNIB will have to justify its needs for funds from United Way and government."

Basken, last year's United Way campaign chairman, said his doubts about CNIB arose after he talked to government officials investigating complaints about CNIB's vocational workshop in Edmonton, and to representatives of the Alberta Federation of Labor.

CNIB announced it was closing its employment program in the workshop after a two-week strike by 11 workers protesting working conditions, pay, benefits and quality of the training program.

Nine blind workers are jobless as a result of the closure.

Labor lawyer Jim Scott and AFL executive secretary Eugene Mitchell, who have accompanied workers into negotiations, said the CNIB decision was an irresponsible and shocking tactic to use against the blind.

CNIB director Robert Elton said the organization was forced to close the program because it couldn't meet the shop worker's wage demands. They currently earn between 40 cents and $3.70 an hour.

Provincial government officials say the province would pay half the workshop's rent and give the agency an operating grant if CNIB applied for vocational training status.

Elton said CNIB hasn't applied for such help.

A decision by major oil companies is expected in early November from major oil companies on a new site for the oil tank farms now located in downtown Victoria.

Capital Region Board member Shirley Dowell said today the companies have agreed to announce their plans before the November municipal elections.

Dowell said a closed door session Thursday between oil company representatives and the CRD oil tank farm relocation committee was an information meeting.

Four sites are under consideration and the companies agreed to hold an open meeting in about 45 days to annouce their decision, she said.

Knife-wielding girl gets 1½ years

A teenage girl bandit was sentenced in county court Friday to 18 months in jail to be followed by 18 months on probation.

Cynthia Ann Cotter, 17, pleaded guilty Sept. 6 to armed robbery of 70-year-old Harold Matthews at Smith's Book and Card Shop, 736 Yates, on the evening of Jan. 9 in which $219.50 was stolen. She was 16 at the time and raised to adult court.

She and two juveniles, a boy and a girl who got suspended sentences and probation in juvenile court, entered the store. Cotter produced a large knife and said "I want your money."

While Matthews struggled to get the knife away from her, the accomplices cleaned out a cash register and the trio fled, only to be caught by police a short distance away.

Defence counsel Barry Mah Ming urged Judge F.A. Melvin to consider probation and Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said it would not be an error to fail to impose a jail sentence because she had spent almost two months in custody but if there was to be a jail sentence it need not be lengthy.

Melvin said it is obvious Cotter is aware that robbery is one of the most serious offences in the Criminal Code, carrying a maximum sentence of life.

"The public must have confidence in the courts to deal with armed robbery," he said.

Court was told that since Cotter's release from custody, she had pleaded guilty to mischief — letting the air out of the tires of a car belonging to a complainant who had filed charges against her of common assault and wilful damage — to which she pleaded not guilty.

* * *

In another case, Judge Melvin sentenced Donald Robinson, 26, to 12 months in jail and suspended sentence for Brenda Joy McKenzie, 28, and placed her on probation for two years.

He directed the prosecution to bring her back before him if she breaches her probation and warned her she would probably be jailed then.

They were found guilty by a county court jury last Tuesday of robbery involving the taking of $32 and identification from Edward Anthony Kubica, 25, in a beating incident at Bastion Square in the early hours of May 9.

* * *

Two men found guilty by a county court jury Thursday of breaking and entering Christ Church Cathedral with intent to commit an indictable offence were also sentenced.

Ronald Gary Hamer, 18, and Michael Joseph Poulliotte, 20, were found by police in a basement area of the cathedral at night on March 8.

Poulliotte, who has a criminal record for breaking into and theft from a house, three convictions for possession of marijuana and one for trafficking in marijuana, was sentenced to three months to be followed by a year's probation.

Hamer, who has only one conviction for possession of marijuana, was given a suspended sentence and one year's probation with Judge Melvin commenting that jail would not be appropriate.

* * *

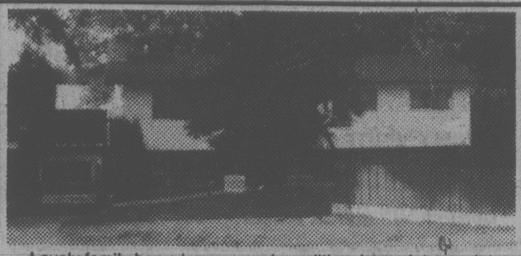
Also in county court, Judge E.J.C. Stewart imposed a 60-day jail sentence on Darrell Carey Mertz, 19, for criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle on Shelbourne Street on March 23.

Mertz gave a white-knuckle ride to Glenn Lawson, 29, at speeds of 80 to 100 km/h following a traffic dispute.

Lawson was riding his motorcycle when he was cut off by a car. He caught up with the car and approached the driver but the occupants locked the doors and rolled the windows down slightly and hurled abuse at him.

As Lawson walked around to the back, the driver suddenly put his car in reverse, plowing into the motorcycle.

Lawson ran over and grabbed the window and Mertz drove off with Lawson clinging to the outside. Half a mile later the Mertz pulled over and Lawson fell off. His only injuries were two sore hands.



Lovely family home in very good condition. Large lot on quiet no-through street. Lynnlark Street, Colwood. 3 Bedrooms on main. Ensuite plumbing and family bath. Fireplace in large living room, dining room. Built-in dishwasher in convenient kitchen. Plus finished basement with extra bedroom. Large rec room, 2-pce. bath. All for $69,000.

If you're an advertiser we hope not, at least not unpleasantly when you find yourself involved in the game of "numbers".

Numbers in the advertising business refer to your audience, whether it be listeners, viewers, readers, subscribers or just plain purchasers of a product containing advertising messages. Of these only the last two can be documented. All other numbers in the advertising game are the results of surveys, estimates, or the publishers stated press run.

In most daily newspapers (the Times and Colonist amongst them) our numbers are the papers we sell and those figures are audited by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. They don't accept the papers we use ourselves in the plant, papers supplied to advertisers as checking copies, papers distributed for promotional purposes or papers printed and unsold. They just count those our customers buy!

You won't be surprised when you select The Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist as your advertising medium. Our representatives can quote our total net paid circulation at any time. Right now it's over 80,000 daily.

Before the judge

A 24-year-old man described by his lawyer as one of the city's outstanding rugby players was fined $500 and banned from driving for one year after pleading guilty Friday in Victoria provincial court to dangerous driving.

David Joseph Defrane, of 707 Esquimalt, entered the plea in connection with an April 6 incident in Colwood.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told Judge Fred Green that Colwood RCMP on radar patrol on the Old Island Highway caught Defrane's motorcycle going 35 km/h over the speed limit and began giving chase.

Speeds reached 115 km/h with Defrane passing a number of vehicles on the double-solid lines and forcing two off the road, going through a red light, and finally hitting an oncoming Corvette, causing Defrane's motorcycle to become airborne before crashing and burning. The motorcycle was a complete write-off and repairs to the Corvette cost $6,000, Laughton said.

Defence lawyer George Jones conceded the driving was atrocious but said it was inexplicable because Defrane had not been drinking prior to the chase. Jones said Defrane was one of Victoria's best rugby players but may never play again because of injuries suffered in the accident.

Green agreed the driving was outrageous and levied the maximum fine as well as imposing the driving suspension.

* * *

Judge Blake Allan imposed 15-day, concurrent sentences after finding 25-year-old Robert Bruce Rosin of 3212 Happy Valley guilty of impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand made by Colwood RCMP.

Testimony was that Rosin drove his vehicle into a parked car on Millstream near Marlisa Place on Feb. 4, suffering minor injuries.

Rosin was convicted in September of 1976 of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and was fined $450.

* * *

Green imposed a 14-day jail term on 63-year-old Bernard Ferguson Major of Parksville, who pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

Victoria police asked Major to move his vehicle, which was double-parked along Fort Street on Aug. 1, Laughton said.

Subsequent breath tests produced two readings of .27.

Major had four previous convictions for drinking-driving offences, the latest May 12, 1977 for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 for which he was fined $100.

* * *

A 25-year-old Canadian armed forces man was charged with two counts of robbery with threats of violence.

Guy Stanley Pearson, of HMCS Terra Nova, is charged in connection with two Sept. 5 incidents, one resulting in a man being held up for $573 and the other resulting in a $100 loss.

Defence lawyer Robert Pearson elected trial by judge and jury and a preliminary hearing date of Jan. 28 was set.

* * *

Two persons who pleaded guilty to stealing from their employers were remanded by Green for a pre-sentence report.

Terrance Joseph Marra, 21, of 1631 McKenzie, pleaded guilty to theft over $200.

Court was told Marra was employed in the sporting goods section at Woolworths and was put under surveillance by security staff July 9. An undercover security officer bought a fishing rod for about $32 and some assorted fishing equipment for another $3.61 and the surveillance team saw Marra ring up only $3.61. They also saw Marra take another $100 from the till the same day.

Marra said the money was used to pay debts, buy groceries, and purchase golf clubs and liquor.

He was remanded until Oct. 19 for sentencing.

Johannes Evers, also known as John Paul Evers, 17, of 1325 Vining, pleaded guilty to theft under $200.

Laughton said Evers was employed at the Canadian armed forces base service station on Lyall Street when a discrepancy of $117 was discovered in the cash.

Military police checked a garbage container July 17 and found $105 stashed there. They dusted the bills with ultra-violet powder and kept surveillance until about 10:45 p.m., when Evers was seen going into the container and picking up the money.

Green remanded the youth until Oct. 22 for sentencing.

A Uclulet youth, 18-year-old Robin Mark Perrin, was given a four-day jail sentence after pleading guilty to possession of LSD.

Crown counsel Malcolm Macaulay said Perrin was a back-seat passenger of a vehicle stopped July 24 at Government and Princess. A search produced five "hits" of LSD which Perrin admitted buying earlier in the day at the Bastion Inn.

Perrin was fined $100 in Alberta on Jan. 17 this year for possession of narcotics.

* * *

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: George Kennedy Fisher, 48, of 812 Elrick Place, $325; John McMillan, 21, of 247 Gorge, $325; and Timothy Robert Kenney, 24, of 225 Ganges Crescent, $300.

Caribou treaty opposed

FAIRBANKS (AP) — North Slope Borough Mayor Eben Hopson has called a proposed U.S.-Canadian caribou treaty unconstitutional and has asked for a delay in efforts to complete it.

A spokesman for Hopson read a statement expressing opposition to the treaty at a public meeting called Friday in Fairbanks by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Hopson asked that further work on the treaty be delayed until after Oct. 15 and 16, when he said an Inuit Caribou Habitat Commission, a circumpolar organization of Eskimos which he is forming, will hold its first meeting.

Fish and wildlife biologist Peter Lent explained that the draft treaty stems from a meeting last April between representatives of Canadian and U.S. game management agencies.

Some natives at the hearing expressed support for the treaty negotiations.

Jonathan Solomon of Fort Yukon said the treaty should include language guaranteeing priority to subsistence users of the international herds.

Solomon said the treaty should be limited to the porcupine herd and exclude two other herds currently listed in the treaty which migrate between the two countries.

Representatives of the Sierra Club and the Audubon Society expressed support for the treaty.

Sierra Club spokesman Jack Hession said negotiations should proceed expeditiously because the herds could be threatened by proposed oil and gas exploration in the Arctic National Wildlife Range, and by a recent offshore oil discovery in Canadian waters.

OAP to $179 in Oct.

OTTAWA (UPC) — The benefits paid on basic old age security pension (OAP), Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS) and Spouses Allowance will be increased, the Minister of State for social programs, Heward Grafftey, announced.

Grafftey announced the increases in a statement released Friday.

The basic OAP will go up in October to $179.02 a month from $174.82. The maximum Guaranteed Income Supplement for a single person will increase $3.44 to $146.97.

The maximum GIS for a married couple will rise to $122.20 each from $119.34. Added to the basic pension, the GIS would give each married pensioner $301.22, or $602.44 for the couple.

The GIS is paid to pensioners whose income, apart from the old age pension, is limited. The amount of the supplement varies in relation to income.

The maximum Spouse's Allowance will increase to $301.22 from $296.16.

OAP and GIS payments are increased quarterly based on the cost of living.

No blame laid in mine death

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The death of a Kamloops man working at the Highland Valley mine site near Logan Lake was unnatural and accidental, a coroner's jury ruled Friday.

Ronald Alford, 50, died instantly July 18 when a 14-metre-long earth mover was driven over him. An autopsy found Alford had a fractured skull, multiple rib fractures, hemorrhaging in his chest and multiple lacerations to his lungs, liver and spleen.

The jury made two recommendations to help prevent similar deaths in the construction industry: Workers should wear high-visibility clothing such as orange safety vests and heavy equipment should have mirrors to eliminate "blind sides".

The driver of the earthmover that killed Alford testified he didn't see the surveyor who had been squatting beside the machine taking a reading.

Now, I realize I'd better be careful how I handle this or they can have a thousand women here in half an hour, all marching, carrying signs . . .

The subject is the building of the body beautiful — both male and female — and I can tell you, you've come a long way, babies, since the days of stays and corsets to the era of heaving weights.

And very soon, right here in Victoria, you will have come even further than any of the women elsewhere in western North America.

Body building, or pumping iron as they say, has been around a long time for men. Though a few women have dabbled with weights, most have stayed clear of them lest they end up like Russian shot-putters.

Now, it seems, more and more women are getting involved in what they call progressive resistance training.

The reference to weights puts them off, it appears, but what the fairer sex is doing in increasing numbers is still good old weight lifting and the use of other body building equipment.

Trouble is though there just aren't enough co-ed facilities around in the gyms that specialize in body building.

When South African-born Warren Langman brought the legendary Bill Pearl here two years ago to open his Victoria Health Club on Johnson Street, three or four women showed interest in joining — along with a host of men.

There was nowhere for them to change or shower, however, and while the male membership has shot up over the 200 mark, there are still only three or four women working out.

Present owners Peter Mueller and partner Gary Blonden realized the need to branch out.

"Every second phone call we get is an inquiry from a woman," says Mueller.

"Body building is really taking off like mad in B.C."

And so Mueller, a former car repairman whose lifetime hobby has been body building, and Blonden, owner of the Fitness Centre in Nanaimo, will in a week or so move their Victoria Health Club operation downstairs to impressive new quarters.

Male club members will be well catered for with a larger workout room, a power lifting gym at the back and complete shower and sauna facilities.

But it's the women's gym — first of its kind on this side of the continent — that makes the whole thing unique.

As well as their changing rooms with showers and saunas, the ladies will have their own workout rooms of equal size to the gents.

The latest in body building machines — a leg press, a leg-extension table, an inner-outer thigh machine, a bench press (which I'm told is for the development of the bust) and a torso machine — are being brought in from the U.S. and will be set out in almost 3,000 square feet of space, where walls lined with mirrors let them know how they're getting on, or getting the inches off as the case may be.

Gary's wife Sharon and Peter's wife Rini, both of whom have been into body building for several years, will be the women's gym instructors.

And they will be helped out by Gary, once a phys ed instructor with the Canadian Armed Forces and a teacher of the art of exercise for 18 years.

Women body builders do exactly the same as the guys only with a little lighter equipment, Gary explained.

"At the beginning, they do more floor exercises than the men but once their bodies get used to exercise, they do all the same things we do," he said.

The new trend has come because women are no longer afraid of becoming muscle-bound.

"For one thing, they can't," Gary said. "They are not able to put on huge muscles because of the androgenic hormone level. The more they exercise, the more feminine they become. The more a woman exercises, the more her figure takes on a svelte and natural shape.

"Because of the increased interest among women in really taking care of their figure — and I don't just mean dieting — there is a lot more research being done and many of the old wives tales about over-exercising are being refuted."

Gary said his wife is a perfect example.

"She's 35 and has two kids and her figure is literally the envy of all the teenagers and young women she knows," he said.

In an era when there is still controversy over the value of jogging and many try desperately to justify their obesity or inactivity or both, Gary Blonden is adament.

"Good strenuous exercise is a cure all. I really believe that. The human body is the only machine in the world that breaks down when it is not used. Exercise doesn't sap the body of energy, it rejuvenates it."

Okay Gary, you sold me . . . I'm off to get rejuvenated.

Free firewood hard to find

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Winter's coming on, the price of heating oil is inevitably on the rise and everywhere you look there's a plentiful supply of the stuff our forefathers used to solve their own energy crisis — trees.

You think it might be a good idea to beat the high cost of commercial firewood — up to $65-$70 a cord this year — and also get a little exercise and fresh air at the same time by cutting your own.

The catch is finding some to cut.

Although near Victoria there are stands of desirable firewood like red alder there's none close in you can cut for nothing. The closest free firewood means at least a 100-kilometre round trip.

Even the derelict logs which have escaped some tugboat's boom and clutter up the beaches around Victoria are legally off limits.

The last two years Langford forest ranger Bruce Holloway has issued permits to cut firewood but this year with more than a dozen inquiries a day coming in, he is unable to oblige.

It looks like an endless supply of trees out there, but around Victoria only about five to eight per cent of the land is Crown-owned.

"Crown land is hard to get hold of these days," said Holloway.

There's really very little alder available between here and Otter Point, 40 kilometres west of Victoria.

"You see a lot on the Sooke Road but it's all privately-owned."

He said it's a faint possibility the forest service may open up an area for firewood next year, however.

Farther out of town the pickings are better. In fact, 200 kilometres away there's four or five cutting sites between Parksville and Campbell River, according to forest service spokesman Betty Amos.

Lake Cowichan also has some available firewood. Check with the ranger there.

But that's all for Crown land.

Some private logging companies allow cutting on their property. Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber Co. at Jordan River offers free permits — available weekdays only at their office there — to cut in the area and many Sooke and Victoria residents make the long drive for wood.

Pacific Logging Co., the CPR subsidiary with extensive holdings near Victoria, used to let the public on to its land but the company says it became too much trouble to supervise. Now only employees are allowed to cut.

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Shawnigan division has some firewood sites, but the permit and the directions to get there will cost you $5 a cord — a stack four by four by eight feet. You have to be at their division headquarters on Waters Road west of Duncan before 4 p.m. on weekdays.

There are also a few unorthodox ways of getting your wood, if you can initiate yourself into the rather secretive firewood fraternity. Someone who's found his own spot usually keeps it quiet.

A Metchosin four-wheel drive enthusiast who admits to cutting a little alder on the sly says most back roads have areas where someone has cleared off the trees for 20 feet on either side.

And B.C. Forest Products Ltd. says taking alder from a big stand on the Port Renfrew road a few kilometres est of Shawnigan Lake has become a common practice, although no permits are issued and the company tries to discourage cutting.

"For God's sake don't tell anyone about it," urged the Saanich man who tipped the Times about this particular place.

A part-time shake cutter who sometimes drives as far as Port Renfrew to find old cedar has a couple of private spots where he goes for firewood, but nothing would pry the locations out of him.

One reason for the scarcity of alder is that it has become a commercially valuable species. A BCFP spokesman at Crofton said it licenses commercial woodcutters and also cuts alder sawlogs itself, mainly for the export market where it's used in furniture.

How about driftwood? Hands off that as well, no matter how long the logs have been lying on the sand. Technically those logs still belong to the logging company which felled them or the beachcomber who has a log salvage licence for the area, and all the coast around Victoria, even the city beaches, are covered by log salvors.

And sometimes you get lucky. Stormy weather last weekend brought down an old alder almost a metre across at the butt in Hollywood Park on Fairfield Road. News travelled fast and by Tuesday, half the tree was gone, sawn and split into fireplace lengths.

The Victoria parks department seems to look the other way and allows residents to haul away storm-fallen trees and branches pruned from shade trees on city streets.

But in the end, maybe the easiest and cheapest way is just to call one of the guys who advertise in the classified ads. Prices this year range from $45 to $65 a cord, cheap if you consider the expenses of getting your own — $18-$20 a day to rent a chainsaw and at least $30 to rent and buy gas for a pickup truck, not counting your own sweat and labor.

Brice says she'll seek council seat

Greater Victoria school board trustee Susan Brice announced Friday she will seek election to Oak Bay council in November.

"I have enjoyed serving as a school trustee and would now like the opportunity to contribute my ideas and experience at the municipal level," Brice said.

"It is important to maintain a balance between municipal services and the taxpayers ability to pay for these services as council strives to preserve the character and charm of Oak Bay for which we the residents are so proud."

Brice, who lives at 880 Island, taught elementary school for seven years and is a former member of Camosun College Council and the Oak Bay Recreation Commission.

She was elected to the school board in November, 1974 and topped the polls in re-election in 1976 and 1978. She served as chairman in 1977 and 1978.

Brice said if she is elected an Oak Bay alderman, she hopes to be able to continue as a school trustee.

"It would mean one hectic year but I think I could handle it. I feel I have an obligation to fulfill my term as trustee."

Five of the six aldermanic seats will be up for election this year, instead of the usual three, because of the resignation of Ald. Norm Pimlott and the decision by Ald. Shirley Dowell to run for the mayoralty against former alderman John Goult.

Mayor Brian Smith is retiring, following his election as Oak Bay-Gordon Head MLA.

Roadblock nabs three impaired

Three persons were charged with impaired driving and one with possession of marijuana after Colwood RCMP, checked 1,578 vehicles overnight in roving roadblocks.

A police spokesman said today one motorist was given a 24-hour roadside suspension, another was charged with driving without insurance, 12 were handed out traffic tickets and 102 given warnings to have their vehicles tested.

Colwood RCMP also reported that two trail bike riders received cuts and bruises in a freak accident on near Highland Road in Colwood Friday.

Colwood RCMP said Pat McFadden, 20, of 123 Conard and Donald Brens, 16, of 1218 Lockley Drive collided head-on rounding a blind curve on a dirt trail on private property shortly before 2 p.m.

McFadden was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated for a chest injury and cuts to his right ankle.

Brens, who suffered a bruised ankle did not require hospital treatment.

Mayor promises review of road building order

North Saanich Mayor George Westwood said today council will take another look at a municipal order which would force a home builder to put in a costly new road to his property.

Westwood agreed the order, forcing John Shimizu to pave the road from the dead-end of Aboyne Road to his one-acre lot at 672 Aboyne, requires him to build a road to a higher standard than a portion of road which was put in by the municipality.

Aboyne, which runs off Ardmore, is a 13-foot wide gravel lane to the dead-end.

The municipality wants Shimuzu to pave his portion of the road to a width of 24 feet and has ordered him to have the work completed by Sept. 21.

The order says if he fails to meet the deadline municipal crews will do the job and charge him an estimated $8,000.

Shimuzu bought the property in the fall of 1977.

He had to post a $10,000 bond to cover the road costs before the municipality would issue a building premit.

He has already built a gravel road. That alone cost him $5,600.

Although five other property owners in the area have benefitted from the new road, none of them agreed to share in the cost and, Westwood said, there was no way the municipality could force them to do so.

Shimuzu said the municipality is treating him like a developer.

But, he said, if he finances the paving, he won't have any chance of collecting from the five other property owners when they decide to build on their lots.

He said he has appealed to council on several occasions to have the paving order rescinded, without success.

But Westwood said today the situation will be reviewed when council next meets on Sept. 24.

Until then the order will be held in abeyance.

He said home builders or developers opening up new areas not serviced by roads are expected to pay for all costs linking up their properties with existing roads.

A municipal bylaw requires new roads to be paved.

He felt the requirement is fair because real estate values of lots not serviced by roads are considerably lower than those which are.

Ask the Times

Q. How many men died in the Battle of the Somme in the First World War? W.H.D.

A. The Times of London estimates one million men. It depends on the definition of casualty. If killed in action, death as the result of wounds, of diseases such as pneumonia arising out of the living conditions in the trenches are taken into consideration, the figure could be more than a million.

Q. Who made the first successful incandescent-filament electric lamp? H.W.

A. Sir Joseph Wilson Swan (1824-1914) in 1879. He also invented a miner's electric safety lamp and improved the printing process in photography.

Q. Could you please tell me where I could write to the Boston Bruins hockey team? Thank you very much. D.G.

A. The address is : Boston Garden, 150 Causeway St., Boston, Mass. 02114.

Q. We are wondering if you can find an answer for curing "fairy ring" in the lawn. — A.C., Cowichan Bay.

A. The Encyclopedia of Gardening states that these circles of mushrooms may be destroyed by syringing with one pound of sulphate of iron dissolved in three gallons of water.

Family to share big win

It was all-in-the-family for three Greater Victorians who won $100,000 in the Aug. 29 draw of the Western Express lottery.

Sharing the big prize are Roy and Tia Paterson, of 1357 Esquimalt Road, Paterson's sister Grace Ryan, of Sooke, and his niece Shirley Parker of 605 Craigflower.

Paterson, 68, a retired woodworker, said they have been buying tickets since the lottery started and won $100 six weeks ago.

He said he intends to use his share to travel and for openers, he and his wife plan to take a trip to New Zealand.

"It's one place I've always wanted to see," he said.

QUEBEC OLYMPICS EDGE WINNIPEG... ...IN SOCCER BATTLE OF SIMILARITY

Disciplined Wests blank tough rivals

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Coach Bob English thought the contrasting style worked well for his Victoria West club and Carl Draghoun, pilot of Quebec's Lasalle Olympics, shouldn't knock similarity.

After all, Friday's varied systems placed Victoria West, the British Columbia champions, and Lasalle in the driver's seat at the Canadian senior soccer showdown for Labatt's Challenge Cup.

Wests, the hometown hopes, leaned on discipline and the short-passing control game to blank Holy Cross, the Newfoundland champions from St. John's, 2-0.

The Olympics scored a 2-1 victory over Winnipeg Tatra in Friday's opening-round action of the Canadian tournament being played at Royal Athletic Park.

For the fans, an estimated 1,300, the game with the contrast may have been the more pleasing.

That was the Vic West-Holy Cross match.

"Who would have thought that two teams playing so different would have made it so interesting?" English wondered. "They came at us with those big forwards and the big kick but I'm certainly pleased with the discipline and control our players showed."

Generally in command throughout, the Wests won it on first-half goals by John McGuire and Steve Forsland. But English doesn't think Victoria's representatives may have seen the last of the Newfoundlanders.

They're a good, tough and young side and I certainly wouldn't be surprised if we were to meet again.

The possibility exists. The four-team, modified round-robin continued this afternoon and two teams advance to Sunday's championship finale, starting at 1:15 p.m.

Wests can clinch a spot in the final by beating Winnipeg today. Newfoundland could make it by beating Quebec by at least two goals, a possibility that "wouldn't surprise" the Victoria coach.

Nor would it surprise Metro Gerela, the older brother of football place-kicking experts Ted and Roy Gerela. The province's first "golden boy" in youth soccer, Metro is scouting the championship for Vancouver Whitecaps, the recently-crowned champions of the North American (pro) League.

Gerela was one of many who couldn't help notice the similarity of styles that Quebec and Winnipeg showed in their meeting Friday.

"It was almost as if they had been talking to each other. Their styles had an uncanny similarity."

"Everything went down the middle. Winnipeg tried to direct everything to their good striker (Doug Leeies), and I think the result may have been different if they would have sprayed passes off to the wings."

Gilles Lebuis, in the 23rd minute, and Nigel Bradshaw, at 52 minutes scored the goals that gave Lasalle its important first-game triumph. The ever-dangerous Leeies scored Winnipeg's goal at 48 minutes on a penalty kick.

While it was a tossup down to the wire, the Winnipeg-Quebec game didn't match the sustained interest generated in the Vic West-Holy Cross encounter.

Wests were clearly the most constructive. The home team had the definite edge in the first half. Holy Cross came on strongly in the second but, even so, the final score may have flattered the Newfoundlanders because forward Dan Henry missed three glorious chances to put the game out of reach well before the final whistle.

But the Wests couldn't put it away early and Holy Cross, always trying, continued to make late-game threats. The last, and possibly Newfoundland's best scoring chance of the night, came with eight minutes remaining.

John Green unloaded a sizzling shot, almost from atop the penalty spot, during a scramble in front of the Victoria goal. Wests' goalie Jim DeGoede came up with a magnificent save. That was it.

Wests suffered one injury, and it could be a worrisome one. Centre-back Darryl Hooker suffered a severe leg bruise and was a doubtful starter today. After Hooker was forced to leave the field, Vic West efforts appeared to lose some of their earlier crispness.

Cable 10 television will carry coverage of today's matches in the Canadian amateur soccer championship tournament, Monday at 8 p.m.

TOUCH OF MOSS puts presssure on Newfoundland player during Canadian soccer championship action at Royal Athletic Park on Friday. Edgett team efficiency Canada 200 highlight

Quick and efficient.

That was the way to describe the efforts of the J.R. Edgett Racing Team Friday on the opening night of the two-day Canada 200 program for open super-stocks, jalopies and stock cars at Western Speedway.

Headed by Dave Smith and Harvey Chipper, the Vancouver Island team won a pit-stop competition and also sent two super-stocks to the victory circle in heat races.

The Yakima crew of Dave Eaton placed second in the pit-stop event, followed by the Victoria crews of Joe Musfelt and Roy Haslam.

Eaton's assistants go against the Edgett crew for the Rick O'Dell car in the pit-stop final tonight with $500 at stake.

On the track tonight, super-stock pilots will match machines and driving skills in two 60-lap main events. Two 20-lap features are also scheduled in each of the stock car and jalopy divisions.

Gates will be opened at 6 and racing starts at 7.

O'Dell, the regular Edgett driver, guided a 1977 Camaro to a triumph over the favored machine of Wisconsin veteran Mike Miller in Friday's 15-lap fast heat for super-stocks.

Jim Caudwell, handling another Edgett car, a 1976 Ventura, took the 12-lap second heat race before 1,923 spectators at the Millstream Road oval.

Other Victoria drivers grabbed honors in stock car and jalopy events, Dale Taylor and Mike French winning the stocker heats and Dave Bennett and Jim Burnie taking jalopy heats.

Taylor posted the fast stock car time of 19.975 and Rick Hogg turned in the best jalopy time of 24.81.

Eaton registered the fast super-stock time of 16.512 with Miller next in line at 16.693. O'Dell as timed in 16.740, followed by Haslam at 16.750 and Victorians Roy Smith (17.173) and Larry Pollard (17.240).

Smith was an early leader in the fast heat before tangling and spinning with Eaton on the 11th lap. O'Dell charged into the front position and held off a challenge by Miller over the final four laps. Haslam took third place and Smith got back in the running to finish fourth.

Friday's results:

School teams recruited for jalopy-racing summer

Western Speedway will have a new feature and a built-in audience next summer.

Officials at the Langford oval are recruiting high school teams for a new class of jalopy racing and have signed up entries from nine area schools.

The track will provide the car, but the students — both the driver and pit crew — will do all of the work under the guidance of a sponsoring teacher.

Entries have been received from Victoria, Spectrum, Lambrick Park, Reynolds, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Belmont senior high schools as well as Cedar Hill and Spencer junior highs.

Application forms are still available from the Western Speedway office at 1001 Cloverdale.

Early shift suits Tyees

Victoria High Tyees may find benefits from playing soccer on the early shift.

Because renovation work at their school has forced Vic High students to attend afternoon classes at Central Junior High, the Tyees will play most of their Greater Victoria High School Soccer League matches this season at 11 a.m.

Tyees had their first taste of early soccer Friday at Belmont as they opened the new season with a 3-2 triumph over the Braves.

Antonio Noguiera connected for two goals and Bill Hayman counted once as the Tyees forged into a 3-0 and then survived a closing Belmont charge that produced goals by Ken Wallace and Ray McAllister in the final 12 minutes of the game that was moved up from the scheduled Sept. 28 date at Belmont's request.

Vic High's next outing is an 11 a.m. affair Tuesday at Belmont. Other teams open their schedules a 3:30 p.m. Tuesday with Esquimalt at Oak Bay, Mount Douglas at Spectrum, Claremont at Belmont and Parkland at Stelly's.

Rick didn't need pep talk with Cincy Reds in town

By Associated Press

Cincinnati Reds bring out the best in Rick Sutcliffe.

And Friday night, he couldn't have been better.

"You have to take your hat off to the kid," said Cincinnati manager John MacNamara after watching Los Angeles Dodgers' rookie spin a three-hit, 2-0 decision over his team.

The loss cut the Reds' lead to just a half-game in the National League West over Houston Astros, 4-0 winners over San Francisco Giants.

"He just did a job on us," said MacNamara of Sutcliffe. "He changes speeds well and he wasn't afraid to throw the changeup. He makes good pitches and challenges people."

Sutcliffe admitted that he was "up" for the NL West leaders.

"I don't need a pep talk when the Reds are in town," said the 23-year-old righthander. "They're going to be our competition for a lot of years to come and I want to be successful against them."

He had Cincinnati completely handcuffed for a while, pitching no-hit ball until a single by George Foster in the seventh inning.

"I was putting the ball in the right place at the right time," said Sutcliffe. "My changeup was good. I think they respected it. I used mostly fastballs, though, all over the plate. But fortunately they hit the ball right at somebody."

In other NL games, Chicago Cubs defeated Philadelphia Phillies 2-0 in 10 innings and Atlanta Braves topped San Diego Padres 10-7.

Montreal Expos, locked in a tight duel with Pittsburgh Pirates for the East Division lead, were kept idle as rain washed out a doubleheader against St. Louis Cardinals at Montreal.

The other hits off Sutcliffe came in the ninth — singles by Dave Collins and Dave Concepcion.

With Baltimore Orioles opening an ever-widening lead in the American League East — and the magic number for clinching the division title dwindling — Baltimore fans already are beginning to think about the possibility of outfielder Ken Singleton being named most-valuable player.

But there's a man named Don Baylor making headlines for California Angels, West Division leaders, and the Orioles' division title may be settled long before the MVP question.

The Orioles opened a 12-game lead over Milwaukee Friday night, whipping Boston Red Sox 5-3 while Milwaukee was losing 8-7 to California. Singleton hit his 34th home run of the season and drove in three runs, giving him 108 on the season.

In Milwaukee, Baylor upped his league-leading RBI total to 133 with two more Friday night as the Angels eked out a ninth-inning win over the Brewers on Rod Carew's sacrifice fly. Baylor is hitting .305.

In other AL action, Seattle Mariners downed Kansas City Royals 7-5; Texas Rangers outlasted Minnesota Twins 5-3; Oakland A's defeated Chicago White Sox 8-3, and Toronto Blue Jays edged Cleveland Indians 4-3.

Shutouts, a pair

WINNIPEG (CP) — Quebec and Alberta opened with shutout victories Friday in the six-team Canadian Youth Soccer Association under-18 national final.

Steve Polenz, a midfielder, scored both goals for Quebec in a 2-0 win over Newfoundland, one on a penalty kick in the first half and the other in the 87th minute.

Norman Lea scored the lone Alberta goal as his team came on strong in the second half to defeat Manitoba 1-0.

Play resumes today with Ontario playing Quebec and British Columbia facing Alberta. The winners of those games meet in the final Sunday while the losers go against Newfoundland and Manitoba to decide third place.

Bruins shade Cougars 4-3; Turnbull signs with Blues

Times News Services

A goal by Bruce Paton midway through the final period snapped a 3-3 tie and carried New Westminster Bruins to a 4-3 Western Hockey League exhibition victory over Victoria Cougars before 2,000 fans Friday at Powell River.

It was the first official pre-season outing for Cougars, who face the Bruins in Parksville tonight and again Sunday at Lake Cowichan.

Rick Amann, Anthony McMurchie and Pat McGill scored Bruins' other goals while holdover centre Barry Pederson, with a pair, and rookie winger Bud McCarthy replied for Victoria.

Two Bruin goals came on power plays as Cougars took 10 of the 19 minors.

In other WHL exhibition action, Billings Bighorns, down 2-0 heading into the final period, clipped Lethbridge Broncos 5-3 in Lethbridge. Ian McInnis, with two, Dan Earley, Glen Johannsen and John Eger connected for Billings while Mike Moller, Brad Owen and Doug Morrison replied for Lethbridge.

Storm's backlash causes a spilling time for women

Times News Services

Spin-off winds from Hurricane Frederic capsized about half the 60 boats in the world women's sailing championships Friday.

There were no serious incidents, however, and the competitors managed to right their vessels and continue, race organizers said.

Karen McRae of Toronto slipped from third place into a tie for sixth in the Laser division after five races on the Lake Ontario course off Rochester, N.Y.

Annette Henderson of Edmonton was ninth in the Laser standings and Judy Lugar of Halifax was 13th.

The remnants of Hurricane Frederic produced one-metre waves, steady rain that reduced visibilty and winds of 55 kilometres an hour.

The Laser leader with one race to go was Marit Soderstrom of Sweden. Cathy Foster of Great Britain, who won un unprecedented four straight races, clinched her second straight International 402 title.

Meanwhile, at Weymouth, England, the sixth race of the world Finn class championship was wiped out Friday when a protest by a United States competitor was upheld. The U.S. sailor protested that one of the buoys was moved without proper procedure.

In the race, Larry Lemieux of Edmonton placed seventh, while Rob Woodbury of Ottawa was 14th and Peter Higgins of Toronto wound up 17th. After five races, Lemieux was 18th overall, with Woodbury 37th and Higgins 38th.

Halldorson three strokes behind Buick Open leader

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — A quick double bogey, or bad weather — or both — is enough to crush many golfers and ruin their round, but that didn't happen to Dave Eichelberger.

Eichelberger suffered a double bogey in each round but still fashioned a 68 Thursday and a 70 Friday for a six-under-par 138 total, to lead by two strokes as third-round play began today in the $150,000 Buick Open.

"The double bogey didn't hurt," the 6-foot-1 Texan said. "I felt I was playing well."

Friday's second round over the 7,001-yard, par-72 Warwick Hills layout was played on a course made soggy by an overnight rain and in chilly winds.

Eichelberger, who has not won on the PGA tour since the 1977 Greater Milwaukee Open, said he felt the rain made the greens easier.

George Burns, George Archer and Cesar Sanudo were tied for second at 140.

Eight were tied at three-under 141, including Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man. Dave Barr of Kelowna missed the cut with a 149 total.

Thirty-eight of the 51 players who survived the cut at one-over 145 were in at par or better.

Palmer, Bradley share in a record

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sandra Palmer birdied the final four holes Friday and teamed with Pat Bradley for a record 12-under-par 61 and the first-round lead of the $110,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association team championships at the Portland Golf Club.

The leaders birdied two of the first five holes on the back nine and then Palmer birdied out for the lowest round in an LPGA team championship event.

The Palmer-Bradley duo took a three-shot advantage over Joyce Kazmierski and Sandra Spuzich, 31-33 — 64.

Janet Coles and Lauren Howe were next at 65 while Jo Ann Washam and the tour's leading money-winner, Nancy Lopez, were among three teams at 66.

Under the team format, players count only the best score on each hole.

Katie Biszantz made a hole-in-one of the 123-yard fourth hole, but she and partner Robin Walton could manage only a one-under-par 72.

Tomlin Cup match

Albion will be shooting for a berth in the Canadian club cricket championship while attempting to return the Tomlin Cup to Vancouver Island when the club tangles Sunday with the Brockton Point side from Vancouver.

Winner of the Victoria and District Cricket Association championship, Albion will meet Brocton Point, the Vancouver titleholder and defending cup champion, on the Beacon Hill Park pitch at 12 noon.

Contested eight times since being launched in 1968, the Tomlin Cup event has produced only two Island winners, Cowichan in 1968 and Alcos in 1975.

The cup champion represents British Columbia in the in the national event.

Another cricket highlight is scheduled at Beacon Hill Wednesday, when the Kent County sie from England plays a Victoria President's team in an all-day match.

Pension planned for retired boxers

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Professional Boxing Council, spearheaded by president Vince Bagnato, has taken the first step towards establishing a pension for retired boxers throughout Canada.

Bagnato said all provincial boxing commissions have been urged to set up retirement pensions for boxers by deducting 10 per cent of a fighter's purse and investing it in a retirement savings plan.

'Compatibility' works for Yanks

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va. (AP) — If you are looking for a reason why the United States has dominated the Ryder Cup golf series since its inception 52 years ago, Hale Irwin may have it.

After the U.S. took a 5½-2½ points lead Friday in the rain-soaked first round of the series held every two years between U. S. and European pros, Irwin hinted that mere compatibility may be the key.

The U.S., whose golfers seem considerably more relaxed than the British and other European golfers, is seeking its 10th victory in the last 11 Ryder Cup matches.

Irwin said his relationship with teammate Tom Kite was obviously more friendly than that of Des Smyth and Ken Brown. Irwin and Kite defeated the British 7 and 6 — the most lopsided result in Ryder Cup history.

"It was very obvious there was no rapport between them," said Irwin, "They did not have the slightest bit of idle conversation.

"On the American team you'll never find anyone who says another golfer is playing badly, at least not trying to stick a barb at him."

European captain John Jacobs admitted the pairing of Smyth, a first-time member of the team, and the veteran Brown may have been a mistake. Brown played, and lost, a morning best-ball match with Mark James, and then was teamed with Smyth for the afternoon foursomes match when James aggravated a rib injury.

Neither Smyth nor Brown was scheduled to play this morning when the three-day series resumed with four foursomes matches. In foursome play, which is infrequently played in North America, the two players on each team alternate strokes on each hole.

Lanny Wadkins and Larry Nelson, who contributed to the five U.S. victories Friday, were scheduled for a rematch today with Spanish stars Severiano Ballesteros and Antonio Garrido. Wadkins and Nelson defeated the Spaniards in a best-ball match Friday morning.

Ballesteros and Garrido, the first two non-British golfers to play on the combined British-European team, split their two matches Friday. They defeated Hubert Green and Fuzzy Zoeller 3 and 2. The only other winning European team was Bernard Gallacher and Brian Barnes, who decisioned Irwin and John Mahaffey 2 and 1.

The U.S. had a chance to pick up an additional point in the afternoon, but Lee Trevino and Gil Morgan halved with Sandy Lyle and Tony Jacklin by scoring a bogey on the par-five 18th.

Buildup campaign

Heading for a new season, the Victoria and District Basketball Association is currently somewhat thin on personnel and supporters.

Hoping to improve the situation, officials of the association are searching for additional sponsors, coaches, and players.

Persons interested in sponsoring teams, coaching or playing may obtain information from Bernie Osborne at 595-1879.

Women and men wanting to play with senior or junior clubs may call Verna Mosher (477-9663) and players of nine to 18 years may register by calling Louise Mason (592-0607).

All interested persons are invited to attend the annual general meeting of the VDBA, scheduled Monday at 8:30 p.m. at the Imperial Inn.

Freddie interupts assistants' test

MONTREAL (CP) — Third-round play in the 54-hole Canadian assistant golf professionals' championship was washed out by continuous, heavy rain Friday, a backlash from Hurricane Frederic.

CPGA officials said that unless the downpour abated, the tournament could wind up as a 36-hole event. They were to decide today.

Serge Thivierge of Laval, Que., was the leader after two rounds with a four-under-par 138.

'Dwindling' Loto fund alters athletic plans

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

A sharp cutback in federal travel grants to Canadian universities has forced Canada West and Great Plains athletic conference officials to revise plans for an interlocking basketball schedule this winter.

The schedule, drafted a year ago, would have had schools in Canada West each playing four men's and four women's games against G-PAC schools.

Costs would have been covered by grants from a $450,000 Loto Canada fund available to colleges across Canada for interprovincial travel.

But now the money isn't available. Steve Paproski, federal minister of fitness and amateur sport, told Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union director Bob Pugh of Ottawa July 18 the grants have been slashed to $190,000.

"Loto Canada revenues have, of late, dwindled markedly," Paproski informed Pugh.

Canada West and G-PAC officials this week decided to leave it up to the individual schools if they want to go through with the interlocking schedule, drawn up prior to the fund slash.

Also affected is hockey, which will now play a reduced interlock, and possibly a number of tournaments. The Western Intercollegiate Football Conference embracing both G-PAC and Canada West, will continue.

UVic Vikings were scheduled to host Lakehead and Winnipeg from G-PAC in December's Pacific Rim tournament at the McKinnon gym and play at Regina and Brandon. Vikettes were to play interlcoking games against Winnipeg and Manitoba in a women's invitational tournament at UBC and also play at Regina and Brandon.

Viking coach Ken Shields Friday was not sure his team will make the trip to Brandon and Regina. Nor is he sure Winnipeg and Lakehead will apear in the tournament here.

"If we have to pay guarantees for Winnipeg and Lakehead to come to the Pacific Rim, we're certainly not going to Regina and Brandon without being subsidized," Shields said.

He estimated it would cost $3,000 to pay Lakehead's and Winnipeg's expenses here.

Athletic director Mike Elcock said that under last year's funding formula, which came about under deposed Liberal fitness minister Iona Campagnola, UVic drew $26,000 in federal money which was used for soccer, rugby, basketball, volleyball, women's field hockey, track and field, cross country and gymnastics.

There are a dozen universities between Victoria and Thunder Bay, leaving Canada West and G-PAC with by far the highest travel costs of any of the country's six college conferences. Accordingly, most of the federal money last year was used to pay air fares.

A 1977 study of travel costs in western Canada, prepared by Shields and Tom Fleming, former assistant to the president at UVic, showed that air fares for the schools involved increased 90 per cent over a four-year period.

Unable to keep pace with funding, the universities were forced to cut the number of intercollegiate events from 230 to 154, a decrease of nearly 33 per cent.

Canada West and G-PAC athletic directors have cabled Paproski in a bid to get to him to reconsider. As well as rising travel costs and resulting cutbacks in intercollegiate events, they pointed out that the universities provide the main training grounds for the development of Canada's national and international athletes. Without federal travel aid, they feel they will be unable to carry on the calibre of competition needed to develop national teams.

John McEnroe and Vitas Gerulaitis won the opening singles against Argentina in Memphis, Tenn., Friday, to give the United States a 2-0 lead in their the American zone Davis Cup tennis final.

And today the Americans called on Stan Smith and Bob Lutz to wrap up the series. Smith and Lutz, undefeated as Davis Cup doubles partners, faced Argentina's No. 1 and No. 2 players, Guillermo Vilas and Jose-Luis Clerc. If they win, the U.S. will have an insurmountable lead in the five-match series, and Gerulaitis and McEnroe can play for the fun of it in Sunday's final singles.

Gerulaitis defeated Clerc 6-1, 7-5, 6-1 while McEnroe beat Vilas 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

The second singles match between Sweden's Bjorn Borg and Ivan Lendl was halted because of rain and darkness, with Borg holding a 6-4, 7-5, 2-2 advantage.

Indians battle back

MADRAS, India (Reuter) — India, with four wickets in hand, was 88 runs short of Australia's first innings total of 390 at close of play on the third day of their opening five-day cricket test Friday.

India, resuming at 80 for one after a day's rest, suffered early setbacks when captain Sunil Gavaskar and Gundappa Viswanath, the home team's best batting bets, were dismissed within 33 minutes of each other.

But wicket keeper Syed Kirmani, who joined Gavaskar as "the night watchman" Wednesday, and Dilip Vengsarkar propped up the innings with superb batting. Vengsarkar scored 65 in 111 minutes, including 10 fours and a six. He punished leg spinner Jim Higgs for 14 runs in one over, including a six. Kirmani, who was left out of India's recent tour of England, scored 57 as India reached 302 for six.

Jean Seberg 'smeared' by FBI

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI admitted Friday it tried to "cheapen" actress Jean Seberg's image by planting a news story in 1970 saying she was pregnant by a member of the Black Panther Party.

The 40-year-old blonde star committed suicide in Paris last week and her second husband, Romain Gary, a French diplomat and author, charged the FBI was to blame for her death.

Responding to Freedom of Information Act requests, the FBI made public 1970 memoranda detailing the smear campaign of Seberg, whom it believed to be a financial supporter of the Black Panthers, as part of the bureau's counterintelligence program.

The bureau first released a May 1, 1970, message from the special agent in charge of the FBI's Los Angeles office to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

"Bureau permission is requested to publicize the pregnancy of Jean Seberg, well-known movie actress, by (censored), Black Panther Party," the message began.

"It is felt that the possible publication of Seberg's plight could cause her embarrassment and serve to cheapen her image with the general public," it said.

The official suggested planting the story with a Hollywood gossip columnist.

The memo contained a proposed letter to gossip columnists from "a fictitious person," saying: "I was in in Paris last week and ran into Jean Seberg, who was heavy with baby. I thought she and Romaine had gotten together again, but she confided the child belonged to (censored) of the Black Panthers . . . I thought you might get a scoop on the others."

A high-ranking FBI official, who was not identified, in early May of 1970 approved the action, but suggested the FBI "wait approximately two additional months until Seberg's pregnancy would be obvious to everyone."

The bureau official reasoned, "Jean Seberg has been a financial supporter of the BPP and should be neutralized. Her current pregnancy by (censored) while still married affords an opportunity for such effort."

Included in the FBI files was a clip from Hollywood gossip columnist Joyce Haber, who described Miss Seberg's situation — but identified her only as "Miss A," and said the father of her unborn child was "a rather prominent Black Panther."

At a news conference in Paris earlier this week, Gary said his wife was seven months pregnant when she read the article and the shock was so great she immediately went into labor. The child was dead at birth. Ms. Seberg later was awarded $5,000.

FREDERIC'S LAST GASP hit Buffalo, N.Y., Friday in the form of a storm accompanied by torrential rains. Ex-hurricane dumped four inches of water in five hours, causing extensive flooding in some suburbs. Boys shown here had day off school thanks to this giant puddle on Scajaquada Expressway.

Shot prevents pregnancy

NORTHEAST HARBOR, Maine (UPI) — Scientists have developed long-term birth control injections for women and nose drops to regulate their menstrual cycles. One expert predicts they may be on the market within a year in some foreign countries.

Dr. Kenneth W. McKerns, chairman of the International Society for Biochemical Endocrinology, said the drops may also be used to inhibit the production of sperm in men, but said more research is needed before they can be used widely as a male contraceptive.

The injections and drops for women "will quite possibly be available in other countries within the next year," McKerns said.

"But I think it will be several years before they're used here" because of U.S. government testing standards, he said.

McKerns was interviewed at a society conference on Reproductive Processes and Contraception which is being attended by about three dozen scientists from the U.S., Canada, France, Belgium, Norway, Yugoslavia, India and Austrailia.

McKerns, a research biochemist from Blue Hills Falls, Maine, said he would "certainly expect" the injections — to be taken monthly or even yearly — to make the birth control pills obsolete.

Besides being more convenient, the injections are safer, he said.

"Pills are not specific enough. You must take them daily which disrupts normal hormone patterns and can cause side effects that build up daily to cause problems," he said.

The injections neutralize a natural hormone of early pregnancy, Choriogonadotropin (HCG), McKerns explained. They affect only the HCG hormone and do not "substitute" other synthetic hormones as do contraceptive pills, he said.

"One form of the vaccination was tested to several thousand women in India, and it cut the pregnancy rate 60 to 80 per cent," he said. "We're looking for 99 per cent so they're being tested extensively right now."

The nose drops "control the release Lutropin, of one of the hormones that regulates fertility.

They are to be taken by women between the 20th and 24th day of the menstrual cycle to induce earlier menstruation.

As a result, the cycle becomes "much more predictable," he said, thereby allowing women to use the rhythm method with more safety.

Couples desiring children can also use the drops to predict the woman's fertile period "almost exactly," he said.

In males, the drops, taken daily, can "inhibit the sperm count 80 per cent down to the infertility level," he said.

But, he said, "We can't say what the dosage will be until more tests are done."

Ginkgo lovers unite!

CHICAGO (AP) — Now comes the ginkgo gang roaming the midwestern United States. Led by Clayton Fawkes, the gang is dedicated to hunting down ginkgos, the oldest living species of trees.

Fawkes loves ginkgos, whose scientific name is ginkgo biloba. But some people call them stinko ginkgos because their plum-size fruit smells like rancid butter and is sometimes irritating tm the skin.

"Ginkgos existed 10 million years ago," says Fawkes, 65, a retired chemistry and biology teacher. "But people don't know too much about them."

A year ago, Fawkes became so interested in ginkgos that he formed a club with the sole purpose of making them better known. Now the club has grown to 212 members in 10 states.

"Ginkgos really are pretty common all over," says Fawkes, who believes he is the world's greatest ginkgo sleuth. "The trees have been found in all 102 counties in Illinois, and I have measured them personally in 100 counties."

Rising price fans Aussie gold fever

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — World record prices for gold have sent thousands of Australians flocking to abandoned gold fields in scenes reminiscent of the gold-rush days of the last century.

Equipped with the latest in metal detectors that cost about $600 each, the new "fossickers" — as Australians call prospectors — have converged on old workings in western Australia and New South Wales spurred on by a spate of recent discoveries of giant nuggets.

The price of gold passed $340 U.S. an ounce this week, and has maintained a generally upward trend in recent months — up $40 in the last month alone — amid concern over inflation and the U.S. dollar.

In New South Wales, near the western town of Hill End where the gold rushes started in 1854, two prospectors using a metal detector last week unearthed a 13.4-pound nugget worth $113,000.

In western Australia, three nuggets worth more than $28,000 were discovered north of Cue, 694 kilometres from Perth.

The $113,000 nugget was found by farmers Peter Culverson and Don Peters, and the Geological and Mining Museum in Sydney said the nugget contained about $55,000 worth of gold. But as a specimen it was worth about $113,000.

To avoid the most obvious problem, theft, the two men locked the nugget in a bank vault after showing it to the press.

The lure of gold has attracted people from all walks of life.

Former bank official Colin Besant has been fossicking full-time since April and found $11,000 worth of gold.

"Every day we see more arrive," he said. They stop at the caravan park, grab their equipment and start digging the first bit of dirt they see."

Sun harnessed for searing hamlet

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — The residents of White Cliffs, a bush hamlet where the sun shines 14 hours a day and temperatures hit 113 Fahrenheit, are happy that someone is going to do something with the weather.

The town, about 665 miles northwest of Sydney, is destined to become the world's first solar energy town.

With an official population of 45 — but with nearer 300 actual residents — the heat-seared township, about 85 miles down a dirt road from Broken Hill in New South Wales, is prepared to switch from diesel, kerosene and wind-blown energy to solar power.

Half of White Cliffs' residents live underground in 111 dugouts to escape the sun and the accompanying furnace-like heat. On the surface are 13 houses, a school, hospital and hotel.

"Solar power is just what we've been praying for," said Tot, who lives with another widow named Edie. (Neither claims to have a second name.)

She and Edie, the oldest residents of White Cliffs, live in a beer can dugout they built 20 years ago.

The widows' dugout, which stays at a constant temperature of 73 degrees, is rivalled only by Joe Stubby's shanty made of 13-ounce beer bottles.

Hydrogen-fueld aircraft proposed

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — Lockheed-California Co. wants to develop a liquid hydrogen-fueled cargo plane on an experimental basis under sponsorship of four governments, the company announced Thursday.

Purpose of the experimental plane, the company said, would be to demonstrate that liquid hydrogen is feasible as an alternate to petroleum fuel in aviation.

It was suggested that four modified versions of Lockheed's wide-bodied L-1011 Tristar would carry cargo between the United States, western Europe and the Middle East for a 2-year experimental period with government subsidies.

Total cost for development, production and delivery of the four aircraft plus spares was estimated at approximately $650 million. Cost for development and construction of ground facilities for the U.S. hydrogen production and airport facilities was estimated at $184 million.

If as suggested, three other nations — Britain, West Germany and Saudi Arabia — entered the project, the sum of aircraft plus ground facilities for program startup was projected at $1.38 billion, Brewer said.

Four cities were suggested as operating terminals: Pittsburgh, United States; Frankfurt, West Germany; Birmingham, England, and Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

Details of the proposal were outlined by Lockheed's hydrogen program manager, G. Daniel Brewer, at the "Hydrogen In Air Transportation" symposium held in Stuttgart, West Germany, this week.

"Today's petroleum crisis indicates clearly that practical alternatives must be developed, and soon," Brewer said.

Mentioning the four major cities considered as example operating terminals, Brewer said:

"These cities were suggested because a significant quantity of air cargo is currently dispatched from each and because they are located in areas with access to resources which can be used to manufacture hydrogen economically.

A study has been made to establish approximate characteristics rquired of a liquid hydrogen-fueled cargo plane, Brewer said. In the case of the Tristar, the wings, tail, flight station and landing gear would remain the same as those now in production.

Engines would be the same as those currently in use with relatively minor modifications, Brewer said.

Russian braves wilderness in quest for freedom

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Alexander was no ballet star or sought-after scientist, but a physics teacher who wanted out of the Soviet Union with a yearning so deep he undertook a 2,500-mile journey to freedom.

He walked, rowed and hitchhiked his way across the Soviet Union, Finland, Norway and Sweden for 26 days — braving risky border crossings and living off berries and wild mushrooms. He reached the U.S. embassy in Stockholm Thursday and formally asked for political asylum.

Still wearing the dark blue work clothes and shoes he donned in Moscow, Alexander asked outside the embassy: "Do you think they will let me in dressed like this?"

"Of course," he answered himself. "This is a free country."

Alexander, 26, asking that his last name be withheld to protect his elderly mother in Moscow, said he chose to leave his native land because he was dissatisfied with a Soviet political system that prevented him from getting a job in his chosen profession because he refused to be a member of a Communist Party youth group.

He told UPI, "I am not a radical, all I am interested in is my own freedom and my right to choose to do what I want.

Alexander began the 2,500-mile odyssey Aug. 19 in Moscow, boarding a train for a 33-hour rail journey to the northern Soviet city of Murmansk. Thumbing rides, he reached Verhnetulomsky, where he assembled a rubber raft and embarked on a 48-hour trip down the Tuloma River.

He rowed by day, stopping at night to eat berries and mushrooms and sleep under a plastic sheet he carried in his backpack.

At the end of his river journey, he camped in the woods near the frontier, watching the movement of Soviet guards and looking for the best place to attempt a crossing.

"I finally decided to try to cross at a point where the barbed wire and wood fence crossed a tiny stream, " he said. "There was a small bridge on the Soviet side and I knew I could use this in my escape."

He passed unnoticed into Finland.

"While I was in Finland I was careful not to meet anyone, because I knew that Finland has an agreement with the Soviet Union to return Russians who go there without permission," he said.

So Alexander walked the next 250 miles through the woods and marshes of northern Finland.

The map he had ended at the Soviet border, so he found his way across Finland with just a compass, using the names of cities he had memorized as landmarks.

He strayed once into Norway, but found his way back into Sweden.

"I had to take a little ferry boat across into Sweden," he said. "When I saw that this was the only way across the border I was afraid because I was sure someone would want to check my papers."

No one did and Alexander sailed into Sweden.

"The first and direct cause of my escape," he said, "was that I could not find work in my special profession because I had not been a member of the Russian communist youth organization."

"The second and main cause was my dissatisfaction and disillusionment with the Russian political system."

Alexander said he had been considered for numerous jobs, but was turned down each time once his refusal to join the organization became known.

"I knew from Western broadcasts to Russia that one of the main features of the foreign policy of the U.S. and President Carter's administration is human rights problems in the world," he said.

Winnie's widow's will unveiled

LONDON (AP) — Lady Churchill, widow of Sir Winston Churchill, left £150,410 ($391,066) when she died, aged 92, in December 1977, says her will published today.

She left 85 of her husband's paintings, together with the American flag that flew at half staff in Washington when he died, to the National Trust, the semi-official body that acts as caretaker for art and architectural treasures that owners want left to the country. She added a proviso that some of these could be offered to the treasury in lieu of death duties, at present unspecified.

She also left all Churchill's papers still in her possession to Churchill College, Oxford. She made bequests to former members of her staff and to friends, with the residue to relatives.

There was no indication of the value of the paintings and papers left by Lady Churchill.

But it became known shortly before her death that high taxation and living costs had eroded much of her estate.

In 1977 Britons were shocked to learn that Lady Churchill was being forced to sell some of her treasured silver, furniture and paintings to meet rising bills, medical expenses, and expenses from the upkeep of her apartment in central London's fashionable Prince's Gate. Chartwell, the Churchill country house, had already been left to the National Trust.

Suggestions were made that special legislation should be introduced or a public appeal made to provide for her needs, but the idea was dropped at Lady Churchill's insistence.

Five of the paintings by her husband auctioned at Christie's in 1977 fetched more than £86,000 (then worth around $223,600).

Mexican oil spill suit filed

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston lawyer has filed a $155-million lawsuit against Mexico's state oil company on behalf of fishermen who contend they have lost money in the world's worst oil spill.

Joe Jamail named the defendants in the federal class action as PEMEX, the Mexican oil monopoly, and SEDCO, a firm founded by Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

"Since the governor of this state has refused to represent the people of Texas, somebody had to," he said. "I filed the suit to force some people's hands and, by God, I think — I know — we can win a judgment."

Spillage from Ixtoc I, a PEMEX oil well in the Bay of Campeche, has stained more than 150 kilometres of Texas beaches and sent oil slicks over a wide area where fishermen harvest shrimp, oysters and crab.

The well has pumped more than 98 million gallons of oil into the Gulf of Mexico since it ruptured June 3.

Officials hope to cap the well this month.

Clements, Texas' first Republican governor in more than 100 years, placed his interest in SEDCO in trust and dissociated himself from the multi-million-dollar firm before his election. The Dallas-based company leased to the Mexican government the offshore rig that collapsed.

PEMEX officials refused to comment the oil suit. Clements was in Moscow and not available for comment.

Matching pants and two styles of skirts . . . one a trouser skirt with front slit, the other slightly gathered with a bit of a flare . . . Another group consists of hacking jacket in a brown and beige plaid tweed . . . one skirt with side slits and pockets . . . the other cut on the bias . . . A fine brown tweed double-breasted jacket has matching front-pleated skirt . . . We love the corduroy group in either raisin or beige . . . Blazer jacket, matching pants and fly-front skirt . . . There are blouses to co-ordinate beautifully with all of these . . . And while space has precludes us giving prices of everything . . . we assure you these Evan-Picones are not exhorbitant . . . Circle next Thursday in red! . . .

Last Tuesday we got what might be termed a "sneak preview" . . . or at least a comprehensive rundown on . . . an exciting happening at Standard Furniture scheduled for next Thursday, Sept. 20 . . . The story is this: Standard have been able to purchase . . . at a very special price . . . a large truckload of Grange Elegance mattresses and box springs . . . These are chiropractic mattresses designed in cooperation with orthopedic surgeons to give a very special kind of support from top to toe . . . and complete answer to anyone with back problems . . . And know why Standard got these at such tremendous savings? . . . Simply because the company had discountinued this particular kind of cover! . . . All we can say is, strange are the ways of big manufacturers! Lucky for you, though, because Standard is going to sell these luxurious mattresses at savings you won't believe! . . . On top of all this, they've also procured a large quantity of Sealy Posturepedic mattresses . . . the kind that are made especially for hotels . . . We know we've often slept on one of these at some good hotel or other . . . and wished our own bed at home could assure us as good a night's sleep! . . . Anyway, these Sealy mattresses will be on sale along with the others next Thursday . . . So if you'd like a top quality mattress and box spring at very big savings . . . we suggest you get down there . . . it'll be well worth the trip! . . . P.S. If you were to sneak in on Wednesday there's just a chance they might even sell you one then! . . . Standard Furniture Co. 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Bird feeders must think out plan

Wonderful World of Animals

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've spoiled the birds around here. We've been feeding them lots of good stuff all summer. What will happen to them when we move back to town and their "free meals" suddenly quit coming? — L.A.

DEAR L.A.: Suddenly stopping the bread line could bring on an energy crunch for some of your feathered freeloaders. It depends on how hard they'vbe been leaning on your handouts, of course. For birds gearing up for migration it could be a real hardship. Conversely, it might convince some to plan a trip south who may otherwise have figured to stick around for free grub through the winter. If they have been depending on your water supply, too, that coyuld be an even more critical shortage for some of them. At least it's better to shut down feeding station operations now than to wait until really rugged weather sets in and there are no alternatives available to them. Anyone who is going to have to stop feeding the birds sooner or later anyway had better do it sooner — either now, or else carry through until spring.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Last year, I fed Slippery, my snake, a frog. He made friends with the frog instead of eating it. Boy, was that a mistake! Just last week Benny (the frog) ate him! That's gratitude! Since then, I've been told that Benny was a bullfrog and they eat snakes! Do they? — N.N.

DEAR N.N.: Benny's breakfast (or was Slippery supper?) proves the point. Bullfrogs tend to dine on almost any living prey they can cram down that capacious craw.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: When you mentioned this blackhead thing on the chins of cats, I checked mine and, sure enough, both of my short-haired cats had what you've called feline acne on their chins.

It's sort of a black, gritty mess embedded right in the skin. My vet cleaned it up for me, and I'm keeping their chins clean now. My only comment is that I have two other cats, both long-haired, and neither of them has a dirty chin. Is this just coincidence, or does the long hair have something to do with it? — E.M.

DEAR E.M.: Yes, long-hairs are less likely to develop this feline syndrome. Since old food buildup on the skin is a factor, the long-hairs suffer less since food sticks to the hair instead of to the chin itself, and is consequently easier for the cat to wash away before it has a chance to become embeddedin the skin.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: The neighbors just took their dog to the doctor. Betty is still just a puppy and she's had all her shots. They don't yet know what's causing it, but she's having some kind of fit or something. She runs around barking like crazy. Years ago, I had a puppy that had some kind of fit, and she turned out to have distemper.

But Betty has had all her distemper shots and even the rabies. Could she get distemper anyway? — W.F.

DEAR W.F.: If Betty has been properly vaccinated for distemper and rabies, it's highly unlikely either of those diseases is involved. Of course, those infections and others could cause hysteria or seizures, but there are also many other possible causes ranging from heat stroke to intestinal parasites to poisonings. Lead poisoning, for example, can cause behavioral changes from nervousness to hysteria or grand mal seizures.

Injuries from cocaine are surely no turn-on

There was a time that I could not go to a party without someone passing around a joint of marijuana. I was one of the few who seemed to have fun without it. Now the scene has shifted and cocaine is the new toy they're playing with. One of my close friends insists that no harm can come of this cocaine sniffing. Is this true?

B.G

Dear B.G.: It is not true. In the past year, I have seen eight patients who have been sniffing large quantities of cocaine for a relatively long period of time. The damage done to the mucous membrane of the nose, the cartilage and to the blood vessels is terrifying. Perforations of the nose, crusting of the nose with inability to breath through it, and persistent bleeding are only a few of the effects of cocaine sniffing.

In addition, there is mental confusion, insomnia, restlessness, fatigue, personality changes and disruption of productive patterns of living.

Toxic and fatal consequences of cocaine have been reported by pharmacologists and physicians in the past few years.

Cocaine is not the safe recreational drug it is touted to be. Your close friend would do well to seek the guidance he obviously needs to break the cocaine habit before it completely envelops and destroys him.

My elderly father is confined to bed. I know that it's important to keep turning him in order to avoid bedsores. This isn't easy with limited help. Can you suggest anything?

T.C.O.

Dear T.C.O.:

The prevention of the dangerous complications of bedsores needs careful planning. Patients with long-confining illnesses tend to develop bedsores on the heels, thighs, buttocks, back and, occasionally, the head.

There are many synthetic and lambskin paddings that add to the safety of bedridden patients. Rubber rings and padded absorbent cotton rests are very helpful.

There are now some excellent pulsating mattresses which, besides being soft, also stimulate the circulation in pressure areas and thus help avoid bedsores.

Dry, unwrinkled sheets, gentle massage, lubricants and baby powder should be part of the equipment, in addition to turning the patient from side to side at regular intervals.

Bedsores ae annoying, persistent ad difficult to cure. Their prevention demands the most arduous care, but it is well worth the effort involved.

Speaking of your health: Advice to diabetics is don't make the choice between oral medications and insulin for injection without your doctor's advice. Play it safe.

Dinner on the fly

LONDON (AP) — Rural restaurateur Alan Peck won the Great Grouse Race for the second year and cut four hours off his previous time for getting the season's first birds from Scotland's skies to affluent diners in the London area.

Peck, his restaurant manager Michel Lengui and two colleagues flew to Scotland for the opening of the grouse seaso and were firing away on the moors near Edinburgh at 6:15 a.m.

Bagging 36 of the small strong-flavored birds, they raced to the airport by car, flew south to London, caught a taxi to an airport hotel, and took a helicopter to the parking lot of the Onslow Arms, Peck's restaurant in the well-heeled Surrey village of West Clandon 40 kilometres south of London.

Chef Ewart Morgan was waiting, and five hours and 57 minutes after the first of the birds was shot in Scotland, they were served to appreciative diners.

The cost was £9 ($23) a serving and no extra charge for air delivery.

For years the Cafe Royal and other downtown London restaurants competed to serve the first grouse of the season. Outsiders didn't stand a chance until Peck came along.

Cafe Royal chef Roger Banfield said his restaurant served its first grouse at 1.30 p.m., 78 minutes after Peck's.

"Aboard the plane from Edinburgh we carried our grouse as hand baggage," said the victor. "All the other birds went in the cargo hold of the aircraft. We were in the helicopter before the other birds could be unloaded. That gave us a head start."

Creative drama offered to young

Bastion Theatre School is taking registrations for the 1979-80 drama classes which will begin at the end of September.

New classes added this year include creative drama and creative movement for pre-school children aged five and six, and a class in movement for creative drama and the stage for all ages.

There will be one intermediate class (ages 11 to 14) for beginners and one advanced class for which students will be accepted by audition.

One of the senior classes and one of the adult classes will be geared specifically to a play in process. Students joining these classes will read for roles at the first session and work on the play throughout the course. Other senior and adult classes will cover acting technique.

The pre-school and junior classes are scheduled for Saturdays. Other classes take place after school and in the evenings. Instruetors are Karel Loganhume, Lina de Guevara and Peter Gordon.

Further information regarding times and fees can be obtained at Bastion office, 1002 Wharf, or by phone, 386-8301.

abby

Dear Abby:

My husband and I and our children recently visited my brother and his family who live in a very affluent suburb of a prairie city. We all had a wonderful time — especially the children. We have a daughter 14, and a son, 12. They have three boys, 10, 12 and 15.

After returning home our son told us (in confidence) that his 15-year-old cousin had offered him some pot. Our son refused. He said he never actually saw his cousin smoke pot, but he was sure he had. I then asked our daughter if she knew anything about it, and she reluctantly said her brother was telling the truth.

After much debate, my husband and I telephoned my brother and his wife and told them what our children had told us. Their reaction was unreal! They said their son had never smoked pot and our children are lying! Now my brother and his wife are angry with us.

Should we have called? If not, how can we restore our once-good relationship with them? If our children had smoked pot, we would want to be alerted.

NoName

Dear No Name:

You shouldn't have called. Perhaps time and the realization that you meant well will improve your relationship. Your children shouldn't have betrayed their peers, and you shouldn't have violated the confidence of your children.

Dear Abby:

How do I politely decline an invitation to a party without lying? Is there any really socially acceptable excuse?

Supposing I just don't like parties? Or what if I feel I would be bored, etc.?

It would be a lie to say, "I'm unable to attend."

Stay-at home

Dear Stay:

If you want to be scrupulously honest, you may have to be brutally frank. But since you don't like parties, say so — and you'll not be bothered with invitations which is what you want, right?

Dear Abby:

There is a great deal of controversy in my family as to the proper terminology of the following:

When the bride enters the church to meet the groom, is she walking up the aisle? Or is she walking down the aisle?

Confused

Dear Confused:

She is walking DOWN the aisle. After the ceremony she walks UP the aisle.

Who will the lucky girl be?

. . .And the bride wore a mike. . .

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Stomach butterflies before a marriage ceremony aren't unusual, but one Greater Victoria couple preparing to tie the knot will have a good reason for stage fright.

The lucky pair will be the stars of a traditional wedding performed on stage at McPherson Theatre Jan. 20.

Their wedding will be part of a CKDA promotion stunt.

Seats, with the exception of about 100 at the front reserved for invited guests, will be given to curious onlookers on a first come-first serve basis.

CKDA promotion director Jan Noble says the station hopes Chek-TV or the local cable televison channel will film the event.

Incentive to turn a wedding into a production number is the lure of somebody else picking up the tab.

Noble believes young girls still dream of traditional weddings, where bride gowned in frothy white walks down the aisle followed by her maids in view of hundreds of admiring guests.

But today's prices put deluxe formal ceremonies out of reach of many young couples.

So CKDA is sponsoring a contest and will get advertisers to pay whole shot — including a tiered cake, bridal outfit and a honeymoon wardrobe.

Also part of the deal is a reception and the honeymoon, which will probably be two weeks in Hawaii.

Bridal shows are fairly common, but the public wedding is a new twist for this area Noble says and CKDA wants it to be a classy affair.

A gold embossed album containing facts about the high consumer tendancies of young marrieds during the first year of wedded bliss is used in negotiations with local furniture, appliance and clothing firms asked to contribute their wares in return for the publicity.

Three wedding fashion shows will take place at McPherson before the 7:30 ceremony and merchandise displays will be set up in the lower and upper foyers.

A classified advertisement in the personal column of the Times invites couples who would like a wedding that's "the talk of the town" to send in their name address and phone number. CKDA has aready received several replies and plans to keep running the ad.

Only one restriction has been placed on entrants — they can't be divorced. Age and religion are of no consequence.

But Noble said the winners must be outgoing and able to project.

All entrants will be asked to fill out a questionnaire stating why they want to get married on stage.

A panel judges will select the winning couple on the basis of the questionnaire and a personal interview.

One of the judges will be University of Victoria chaplain Walter Donnell, who has agreed to sit on the panel. Tentative judges include a community leader, fashion co-ordinator and a marketing officer from West Coast Savings Credit Union.

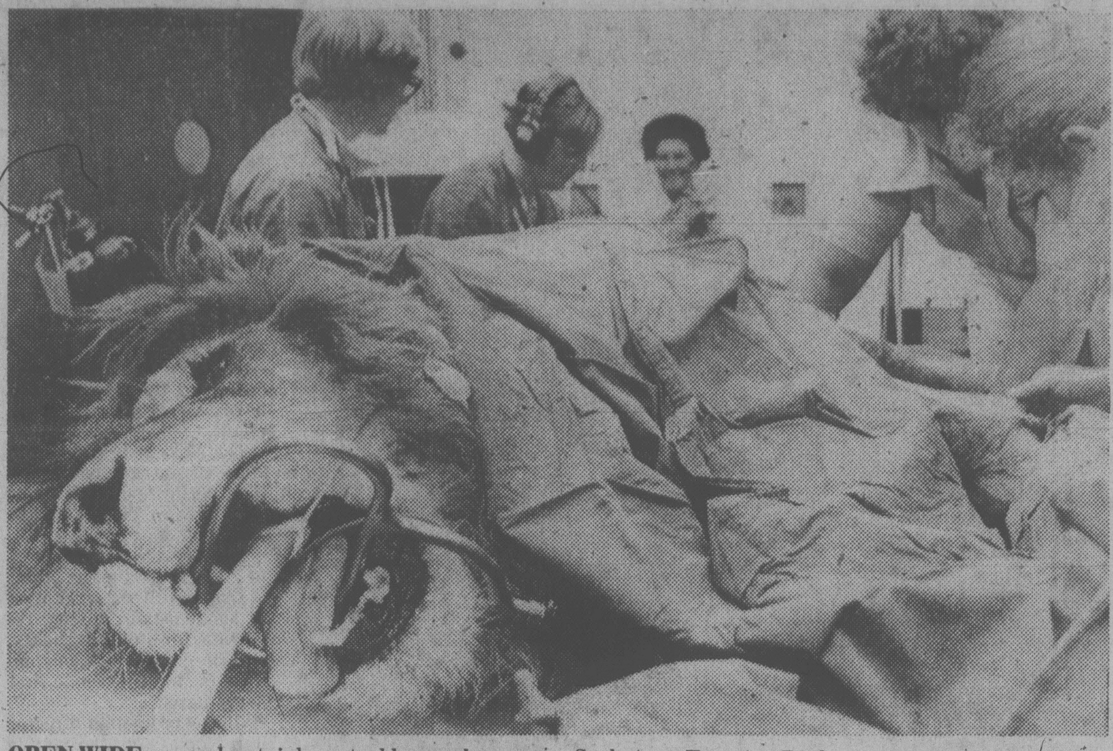
New president for Alberta U.

EDMONTON (CP) — Dr. Myer Horowitz has been officially installed as president and vice-chancellor of the University of Alberta.

Horowitz said in his inaugural address the university faces a number of problems, including a decline in enrolment and the number of doctoral programs; the danger of overemphasis of the university as a setting for vocational and professional preparation to the disadvantage of the university's other responsibilities; financial difficulties faced by students; and the university's image.

"I am convinced that it is essential that we examine carefully and systematically what we are doing at the university so that we can better serve the needs of society in the decades ahead," said Horowitz.



OPEN WIDE . . . and a stainless steel bar makes sure the anesthetized lion doesn't take any involuntary bites while dentists work on three broken canine teeth. George, one of the long-time residents of the Saskatoon Forestry Park zoo, was taken to the University Large Animal Clinic for the root canal work, which was performed by a team of dentists, anesthetists and veterinarians.

Vets feast on food tales

WINNIPEG (CP) — When members of the Hong Kong Veterans Association are reunited, many of the tales they swap about prison camp concern the food.

"If it moved, we ate it," said Sid Vale, secretary-treasurer of the association, as he made last minute preparations for the five-day reunion which ends Sunday.

There were no dogs, cats, mice or rats in the Japanese prison camps, he added.

Vale survived four years as a prisoner of war after the fall of Hong Kong to the Japanese in 1941. During that time his weight plummetted to 43 kilograms.

About 150 former PoWs, members of the Winnipeg Grenadiers and Royal Rifles of Canada, are expected to attend the reunion, along with their wives and families.

Before the fall of Hong Kong, the men served briefly in Jamaica, guarding about 1,000 German prisoners and war detainees. They were transferred to Hong Kong scarcely three weeks before the surprise attack which resulted in the capture of the British colony.

Veteran Bill Sarginson remembered the excitement of PoWs finding some duck eggs.

"They were stamped 1908 and 1912 and they were all black and yellow," he said. "But we ate them and they were delicious, like old cheese.

"We went one year with no salt," he continued. "When we finally got our hands on some dirty, grey salt, we were eating it like chocolate.

"After the war I ate so much of everything I blew up to 220 pounds."

Bert Delbridge, president of the association's Winnipeg branch, says he remembers smothering his food with powdered milk.

"I never tasted anything so delicious. When we were freed, I said I would buy myself a whole can of the stuff and eat it. I had one spoonful and said 'yecch.'

"When the war was over, the Americans began dropping barrels of food to us by parachute. Sometimes the chutes wouldn't open and the food wouLd be mashed together — bully beef, peaches, carrots, everything.

"I remember eating this mushed food with my hands. We would eat till we got sick, then eat some more."

Delbridge weighed 36 kilograms when he was liberated.

After 34 years, they recall only the good times, the things which are humorous in hindsight, he said.

"I'll tell you one thing, it made us closer than brothers. We know more about each other than our wives do.

"But I wouldn't go through it again if you offered me $1 million for only two months," he added.

Since their last reunion two years ago, 52 Hong Kong veterans have died.

"The way we look at it, we've been living on borrowed time for the last 34 years, so when our times come, we're ready for it," Delbridge said.

"If the war had lasted one more year, none of us would be here today. We knew if we had to face one more winter we were finished."

Nothing ventured nothing gained

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed has said his government is seeking a way to channel its oil royalty wealth back into the economy through a venture capital fund not controlled by the government.

Lougheed told Hugh Planche, Calgary-Glenmore Conservative MLA, that the government is attempting to find a way to buy into medium and small business projects which need money.

Provincial Treasurer Lou Hyndman announced the government would begin accepting investment loan applications from businesses wishing to spend at least $1 million on Alberta-related projects.

McCain to grow

WINNIPEG (CP) — The chairman of McCain Foods Ltd. says the company has plans for future expansion in Manitoba.

Harrison McCain, who also founded the New Brunswick-based firm, said Thursday carrot and pea processing is one possibility for McCain's 27-acre Portage la Pairie property.

Royal snail apologizes

CALGARY (CP) — The post office's top administrator in Ottawa has apologized for Calgary's poor mail service, but the gesture hasn't caused any dancing in the streets.

J. E. Uberig, acting deputy postmaster-general, sent the apology in a telegram after the Calgary Chamber of Commerece requested "urgent action" on the local mail problem.

Cliff Black, general manager of the chamber, said Thursday the telegram stated "every effort is being made" to speed up mail delivery to Calgary.

"But I consider that a pretty bland reply," Black said Thursday.

Residents have complained that first-class letters from other provinces take more than a month to reach their mail boxes despite proper addresses including postal codes.

Lake life exterminated

VULCAN, Alta. (CP) — The Reesor Lake Reservoir, once well-known for its rainbow trout fishing, won't have a fish left alive in it by today

Park officials and the fish and wildlife department have decided to kill the fish in an effort to destroy a white sucker population that has taken over the lake. Officials estimate about 85 per cent of the fish are suckers.

Terry Hall, regional manager of the park area, said the poisoning program is "management practice."

The poison takes about one month to completely break down but officials have closed the lake until next spring when it will be restocked.

Beny photos go to Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — the Alberta government will spend $229,000 to acquire the massive photographic collection of Roloff Beny, a Medicine Hat-native photographer now living in Rome, Italy, a cabinet order shows.

The provincial culture department will buy and ship 62,000 color slides, 21,000 black and white transparencies and 80 boxes of prints from the famous photographer's Italian home. It will also pick up assorted memorabilia and first-edition copies of his 12 books.

The collection will be stored him the provincial archives. There are no plans yet to display the work.

High times in Saskatoon

SASKATOON (CP) — Mayoralty candidate Bob Fink, 43, has been granted an absolute discharge in provincial court after pleading guilty to a charge of possession of marijuana.

Fink originally pleaded not guilty and was to have been tried Oct. 3, but last week changed his plea. He was charged after RCMP found 4.5 grams of the drug in his home Aug. 2.

Stelco backs down

EDMONTON (CP) — The Steel Company of Canada Ltd. has agreed to give jobs to two women who had complained that the company's hiring practices were discriminatory.

Lynda Little and Sarah Butson, both of Edmonton, have been hired to work in Stelco's finishing department.

The two women were involved in a protest earlier this year after they said the company had refused them employment on the grounds they failed to meet height and weight requirements.

Alberta issues invitation

Homecoming 1980

EDMONTON (CP) — An intensive advertising campaign inviting former Albertans, friends and visitors to come back to the province to celebrate Homecoming, 1980, is already being well received, says Tourism Minister Al Adair.

The minister told a country hoedown style breakfast that Travel Alberta has already received 100,000 replies to invitations mailed out in June.

Psemier Peter Lougheed's office will send out about 300,000 more in late October.

Why? It's part of the government's plan to celebrate the province's 75th birthday next year.

Anyone in Alberta can have an invitation sent out to friends or relatives from the premier's office.

CNR site chosen

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — City council Monday night selected a 66,000-square-foot piece of land owned by the Canadian National Railways as the site for construction of a $1.5 million police building.

Construction of the building is expected to begin next spring with occupancy planned for the spring of 1981.

Council rejected five alternative sites before selecting the CNR property.

Controlling campers can beat the bears

FALCON LAKE, Man. (CP) — Every year wildlife technician Murray Imrie encourages guests at Whiteshell provincial park to get along with the park's residents, its wildlife.

Since he began his job six years ago, Imrie says he has been bombarded by reports of troublesome bears in cottage and campsite areas and beavers damaging boat houses and plugging culverts.

This is when the wildlife technician tries to teach the visiting public to live harmoniously with the resident animals, Imrie says.

"A lot of people like to see animals at a distance, but they don't want them to cause any trouble.

"We try to get them involved in solving the problem and to make them understand they should try and live in harmony with the animals."

At one time, as many as 60 "nuisance bears" were shot each year.

That was a waste, Imrie says.

After some research he discovered the problem was aggravated by people who left food or garbage lying around their cottage or campsites.

As a result, he began to teach campers to discourage unwelcome visitors by eliminating food odors.

He also began to trap bears and release them elsewhere in the park. Now only five or six bears are shot each year.

Getting people to clear away garbage and food isn't always easy, Imrie says.

"Some people look on it as unwillingness on our part to do anything. But we're really trying to find a compromise."

Bears are not the only animals keeping Imrie busy.

To solve the problem of beavers that build dams in the park's culverts, he places hollow, wooden tubes through the dams.

Mothballs and chicken wire discourage the beavers from damaging boat houses.

It would have been easier to shoot the beavers, Imrie says, but again, that would be a waste.

Jumper survives

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 25-year-old San Francisco woman jumped off the Golden Gate Bridge, and lived to talk about it, authorities said. Ann McGuire, listed in serious condition today after extensive surgery, was believed to be the 11th person to survive the 70-metre from the bridge.

HOMES TODAY is coming . . .

Making Your Home More Saleable!

If you have put your home on the market, you'll want to give yourself every advantage. Any little touches which will speed its sale are well worth the extra effort.

Try to imagine you are seeing your house for the very first time. A freshly painted set of front steps or door-sill goes a long way toward creating that important first impression of a well-cared for home. Repair loose door knobs, drippy taps, cracked windows, broken light switches. Not that these are big things in themselves, but they can give the impression that there are other more serious ones.

Create a warm, inviting atmosphere by having floors and countertops shiny-clean. Buyers can visualize their own furniture in your home with greater ease if yours isn't too crowded. Getting rid of clutter makes the house appear larger.

It won't make four-bedrooms out of three, but cleaning out cupboards, closets, back-porches, and hallways seemingly adds space.

If it's a dull day, turn on lights, if chilly, or an evening viewing, light the fire. Fresh flowers and a spritz of scent don't hurt either.

Realtors advise you not to accompany prospective buyers on a tour of your home. Your presence may make them feel nervous, and actually discourage them from viewing it completely.

For more ideas on selling your home quickly, for the price you're asking, and for other interesting articles on homes, don't miss future issues of Homes Today.

Bikers 'sophisticated' but police still wary

By DAVID AGNEW

TORONTO (CP) — Although the bust-up, rape-and-drunk debaucheries of the '50s and '60s continue, outlaw motorcycle gangs are evolving into businesslike organizations with widespread and lucrative crime networks.

As the style changes, the key word in police descriptions of the gangs is sophisticated. Bikers have become major Canadian sources of illegal drugs, musclemen for loan sharks and gamblers and receivers of stolen goods.

"They're well-connected businessmen with $150,000 to $200,000 houses and the best legal advice," said a police intelligence officer in Toronto. "A couple of real expensive, prominent lawyers pop up in court every time we bring some bikers in."

Frequent targets for biker violence are rival clubs in battles for dollars and markets.

"Every so often they come out tough," said a Toronto police officer. "But primarily what they're talking about is economics, like any war."

The estimated 1,000 members of Ontario's 19 outlaw motorcycle gangs are only a small proportion of the province's motorcyclists — there are about 600,000 motorcycles in Canada — but troubles continue.

Still congregate

A few times a year, a small town is paralysed by a squad of souped-up, thundering bikes, their riders in black leather proudly wearing the club name — Vagabonds, Outlaws, Iron Hawgs — on a crest.

In the safety of numbers they defy the law, refusing to pay bills, brandishing weapons and assaulting passers-by.

But some clubs are trying to avoid those outbursts of violence.

"That's the old-style biker," says a police officer in one Ontario city. "They're a little more sophisticated now and all it does is bring heat on them. They don't want to be as visible."

Part of their success in their new enterprises, however, is due to their continuing ferocity and Ontario police do not underrate bikers' potential for violence.

"They are scary," said one police intelligence officer, who asked not to be identified.

"We've had two or three informants killed, found tied to trees up north with bullet holes in them."

Avoid trouble

But arrests and raids interrupt lucrative enterprises and new-style bikers don't want to lose money.

Police expected Ontario to be the battlefield this summer between the Hell's Angels, the largest American club, and the Outlaws, the Angels' American rivals with affiliates in Toronto, Windsor, St. Catharines and Ottawa.

The Angels have been knocking on the door for a few years, trying to organize a takeover of the Outlaws' turf, but have been rebuffed in their recruitment drives.

Although the war never materialized, the Outlaws have been lining up allies.

"The Outlaws have made a point of getting friendly withthe other clubs," said a Windsor police officer, whose territory is also home to Chosen Few, Lobos and Queensmen.

Clubs in the smaller cities, while sometimes affiliated with a major network, venture little beyond drug trafficking.

The Toronto officer said gangs he watches are involved in "all the rackets — drugs, extortion, strong-arm stuff, stolen goods, strike-breakers" with strong links to other organized criminals, such as the Mafia and Chinese gangs imported from Hong Kong.

Fugitives hidden

Gangs with American affiliates have been known to hide people wanted by U.S. police and one club is suspected of being involved in illegal overseas arms deals.

One club has even incorporated its own real estate firm.

The evolution of the gangs into more sophisticated criminals was compared by one intelligence officer with the rise of the Mafia in the U.S.

"They started out as petty criminals but then drugs came along," he said. "They were couriers at first, then chemicals got big and they got into manufacturing."

Staff Superintendent Bruno Dorigo, head of the Ontario Provincial Police intelligence branch, said the Canadian gangs produce the chemical drugs, such as speed and LSD, and exchange them with American clubs for heroin and cocaine.

They extended their stolen-goods operations and became contract musclemen for other organized criminals.

The Toronto officer speaks of an accommodation between the bikers and other organized gangs that allows each its markets and specialities.

Tough to crack

"Say you're a loan shark, but not big enough to have six guys hanging around the office as enforcers. So you hire motorcyclists."

Infiltration of the gangs is difficult.

"They have an internal discipline that makes it difficult," said a police officer. "It's an area we have trouble infiltrating. The conditions of initiation make it almost impossible."

The initiation rites differ, but invariably involve some illegal act. One club is reported to require membership candidates to murder.

"We manage to do all right," said Dorigo of the provincial police. "We have our sources and our own people in the field."

Dorigo said "a good percentage" of Ontario bikers are either facing charges or have been recently sentenced, putting them out of commission.

A spokesman for the Waterloo Region Police said clubs in the area have been effectively neutralized by charges and convictions and the summer has been quiet.

Image a problem

The black-leather image still causes some problems for people using their machines for recreation or racing.

"We've had some run-ins with police pulling over any group of more than six," said Jim Bentley of the 11,000-member Canadian Motorcycle Association.

"But as we approach the police responsibly we manage to make some headway."

Walt MacKay, technical director of the Motorcyle and Moped Industry Council, said police mistaking the average motorcyclist for a gang member is not a problem. "Police can easily recognize the difference."

And with new brands of motorcycle clubs becoming popular, such as Christian Riders, the Blue Knights, a policemen's club, MacKay and Bentley agree motorcyclists will have fewer image problems in the future.

CHAMPION CHAMPIGNON is a giant puffball hefted by John Daley of Glenburnie, Ont. The 16-pound, 55-inch diameter puffball was found growing in some shrubbery near his home recently.

First man up the Nahanni

Canadian Press

In the early 1900s prospectors said the South Nahanni River held gold: it flowed into the Northwest Territories from the fabulous Yukon.

But for years no one travelled up the South Nahanni.

Early in the century, five men tried and never came back. Two of them were found without their heads. Throughout the North, the region became known as "The Valley of Vanishing Men," the "River of Mystery," or simply as "Nahanni — The Headless Valley."

Then, in 1927, two men arrived who heard the tales but went up the Nahanni anyway. At the Hudson Bay trading post in Fort Simpson, locals poured a round of whiskey and bid them farewell, lamenting that next spring it would be time for another search party.

The men came back, having opened up the river to full-scale prospecting that began in 1929.

Albert Faille, legendary trapper, prospector and explorer, has died, but the other man, Raymond Patterson, lives in retirement here at age 81 and remembers the summer of 1927 well.

Patterson, educated at Oxford and three years a trainee at the Bank of England, went to British Columbia as a homesteader. A little bent with age now, his eyes dim but his memory clear, he recalled in a recent interview how he set out on the Nahanni without any training in white-water canoeing.

"The South Nahanni was just a straight dotted line on the map in those days," he said. "Nobody could tell you anything about this river, so I went to see for myself.

He stepped over to a corner of the study in his secluded home and fetched a paddle carved by Faille when his last store-bought one was shattered on a rock.

"It's long and sturdy," he said. "You needed that for fending off the cliffs when the river wanted to take you somewhere you didn't want to go."

The rugged landscape Patterson survived in 1927 was designated the first World Heritage Site on Sept. 4, in a ceremony in which United Nations flags were unfurled atop a cliff in Nahanni National Park, 1,045 kilometres northwest of Edmonton.

Patterson travelled up the river in 1927 in a canoe he alternately poled and pulled against the current, never knowing what he would find around the next bend.

Meanwhile, Faille was making his way in a canoe powered by a 3½-horsepower outboard engine.

Sometimes they sat together around a campfire, the only men in an uncharted wilderness, and talked of those who had come up the river before them but had never gone back down.

The McLeod brothers, Willie and Frank, died on the river sometime between 1904 and 1908 along with a third member of their party, Robert Weir. The skeleton of one of the brothers was found without a skull.

Six years later, the headless remains of adventurer Martin Jorgensen were found 110 kilometres upriver from the McLeods' last camp. About the same time, a trapper froze to death while trying to winter on the Nahanni.

Patterson later wrote a book called The Dangerous River in which he dismissed the legends as the work of men with good imaginations and said the deaths were caused by a harsh environment where a single mistake can cost a life.

"If you died in your sleeping bag there today, the bears and wolverines would get in there and toss the corpse all over the place.

"It never worried me being alone in the Nahanni. It never worried me about the McLeods being killed either. I camped where they died and you know what? I had a good night's sleep."

Que. driving licence to kill?

QUEBEC (UPC) — Quebecers appear to take a perverse joy in being tagged the worst drivers in Canada, but nobody is joking about the proposed revisions in the provincial Highway Code.

A parliamentary commission studying the proposed changes heard the City of Montreal call the move "a licence to kill." The newspaper La Presse asked rhetorically if "Quebecers have too much Latin blood to permit right turns on red lights."

Most Canadians have some first hand experience with Quebec drivers, and it's their infamous lack of highway courtesy that causes officials to wonder if greater liberties wouldn't cause a higher injury and fatality rate.

"Experiencing a Saturday night in Quebec is like being transported back 20 years in a time capsule," observed film actor Richard Crenna earlier this summer.

"It's like living in the '50's — everyone has a souped-up car with the radio blasting away, trying to impress the ladies. I just don't believe it."

Highway rules in Quebec are not hard and fast in practice, it's all up to who interprets them.

The Trans-Canada Highway linking Montreal and Quebec has a posted 100 km/h speed limit. But since the highway is a virtual straightaway, the left lane is often used as a drag strip where speeds sometimes reach 160 km/h.

Pedestrians are also fair game in La Belle Province, although seasoned international travelers insist things are worse in such exotic locales as Tokyo, Buenos Aires, Paris and Rome.

Transport Minister Lucien Lessard, who earned the nickname "Whoa, Whoa Stop" for his abortive attempt last spring to purify stop signs by making them "arret" signs (arreter is the french verb for stop), wants to give pedestrians the right-of-way when crossing streets.

"All they have to do is hold their arm up in front of them and cars will stop and they can cross the road," he told a news conference in all seriousness when presenting his Highway Code changes. One reporter quipped, "And that's the way they'll bury them — with their arms straight out."

Quebecers, it was noted, have the least regard for pedestrians, who, it is also noted, jaywalk more than pedestrians in other provinces.

Lessard also wants to have a mandatory review of drivers' licences every 10 years, legalize drinking of alcoholic beverages on buses, allow buses to travel 10 km/h faster than other traffic and require doctors to report any patients that have a medical problem that could be a "risk by driving a motor vehicle."

The minister ran into problems during the hearings when Dr. Augustin Roy, head of the Quebec College of Physicians and Surgeons, accused the government of destroying the confidential "doctor-patient" relationship.

Lessard quickly backed off and agreed to amend the article.

But the whole issue boils down to the La Presse question: Are Quebecers too hot-blooded to handle the reforms?

Most groups appearing before the parliamentary commission generally agree that the public would be better served if the proposed reforms were dropped.

Air service started

HONG KONG (AFP) — A regular air service between Shanghai and Nagasaki, Japan, was inaugurated Tuesday, China's Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency reported Wednesday. The first Japan Air Lines flight arrived in Shanghai at noon, bringing a Japanese delegation from Nagasaki led by its governor, Kanachi Kubo.

THE SWEETEST SHOP IN TOWN

VISITING FROM West Germany, Barbro Hettling gives motorists the thumbs-up sign near Concord, New Hampshire, in an ingenious attempt to catch a lift to a friend's house.

Funds scarce for rarity

MONTREAL (CP) — Deep in the basement of Concordia University's main building in downtown Montreal, an engineer wearing a white lab coat peers into a telescope trained on an image — glowing orange in the interior of a high-temperature furnace.

The image is that of gallium arsenide, a substance used primarily in computer technology, which is so rare and so difficult to make that it sells for $4,000 a kilogram.

And the furnace, the only one of its kind in the world, was designed by a Concordia engineering professor, Dr. Bela Lombos, just to make the compound.

Lombos explained during a recent tour of the lab that gallium arsenide's uses range from digital watches to pocket calculators, high-speed computers, satellites and solar energy converters.

While silicon is the commonly used substance for most of these applications, the Hungarian-born electrical engineer says gallium arsenide is vastly superior.

But less than a dozen companies in the United States and Europe have the know-how to produce it, and Concordia is the only place in Canada where it is made.

The high demand for the product is one reason why it is so expensive. Although Lombos still is perfecting his production techniques and only makes gallium arsenide for the university's own research, he says he easily could sell what he makes. One California outfit offered to buy all he could produce.

Nevertheless, Lombos has difficulty getting funding for his research.

"I've had to borrow from other projects just to get this far."

After working with the substance for more than 20 years, he is particularly keen on finding applications for gallium arsenide in the field of solar energy.

"It even beats nature as a solar converter," he claims.

The most efficient natural solar converter is chlorophyll, the green matter in plants, which has 10-per-cent efficiency, Lombos notes.

"And it only produces spinach."

A paper-thin wafer of gallium arsenide converts the heat of the sun with a 10-per-cent rate of efficiency. It also converts 20 per cent of the sun's visible light into electricity, says Lombos.

He has calculated how it could be used for home solar energy converters and is seeking funding to build and test a prototype under various weather conditions. However, the federal government recently refused to finance such a project.

The wafers also can be cut into ⅛-inch-square "chips," or integrated circuits, which he maintains can handle computer information faster than silicon chips.

Because it tolerates the wide temperature variations found in space, gallium arsenide also is useful for both on-board satellite computers and solar cells.

Lombos says the raw materials for a kilogram of gallium arsenide are easy to find and cost about $500. They are gallium, a by-product of aluminum manufacture, and arsenic.

His unique method of making the substance involves putting a chunk of gallium, a dull metal, and a handful of arsenic pebbles — "enough to kill everyone in the city" — together with a seed of gallium arsenide to start the reaction, in a vacuum tube.

This transparent tube is inserted in the furnace, which is heated to 1236 degrees Celsius for 30 hours.

"This process must be vibration-free," adds Lombos, "which is why the lab is in the basement."

Cooking these ingredients produces a 20-centimetre-long bar of gallium arsenide, which looks somewhat like a chunk of aluminum foil.

Lombos estimates that it would take at least $50,000 a year for three to five years for the university to produce gallium arsenide on a commercial basis. If it were mass-produced, its cost would drop.

Private industry would take the risk in backing such a venture, he says, but adds that he did not like the conditions attached to the offers he has received.

Monterey Elementary School
851 Monterey Avenue, Victoria, B.C.
(Gymnasium)

The Public is invited to come and present their views on the local school programme — Such questions as:—

1. Why are a significant number of students in our schools "dropping out" either mentally or physically, and consequently trying to enter the adult world unprepared to meet its demands?

2. Should the school system maintain the present scope and quality of its programmes, despite the decline in enrolment?

3. Is there a place for parental participation in the programmes of the schools, in an auxiliary or advisory capacity?

4. If we were to return to the basics, just what are they?

Nishgas incorporate tradition in modern life

NEW AIYANSH (CP) — A logging company blast several years ago devastated the rock in the mouth of the Nass River, but it didn't diminish the Nishga Indians' belief in the rock as a symbol of their presence in the valley "since the light of day."

They believe their people were living in this northwestern British Columbia valley long before a Nishga Indian went to the heavens to bring back the rock and daylight.

That original presence is the basis for the Nishga claim to 5,000 square miles in the resource-rich valley which was never surrendered in a treaty.

While the Homeric tale of the rock's arrival is shrouded in myth, the Nishga now can point to more modern symbols of their strength and survival — the new high school and totem pole outside it, a marriage of past and present in this village 80 kilometres upriver from the mouth of the Nass.

The low-slung high school opened in 1976 just after the Nishga gained more control over their children's education with the organization of their own school district.

The school is built of cedar and black lava, quarried just outside the village, which is believed to symbolize strength because it has withstood the stresses and strains of the centre of the earth.

The totem pole was the first one raised in almost 100 years, a sign that traditional ways have withstood the assault of early Anglican missionaries and increasing contact with white society.

"They took the white man's ways but they managed to keep their own culture," says Supt. Howard Gillard, the RCMP's commanding officer in northern B.C.

The proof of that is evident throughout the four villages — Kincolith, Greenville, Canyon City and New Aiyansh — where the 2,500 Nishga in the valley live. Many, however, work part of the year in Prince Rupert or Vancouver.

School children say the Lord's Prayer in Nishga. Anglican priests wear red-trim-on-black Nishga robes, emblazoned with crests of the people's four tribes, and church altars are decorated with Nishga blankets.

The school curriculum's allowance for bicultural studies includes programs in Nishga language, art and history which has resulted in a high political awareness of what the Nishga's 100-year land-claims struggle is all about. Poems in the high school yearbook echo the message seen on signs throughout the valley: "This land is not for sale."

The Nishga first formally took that position in the 1860s, then hired their first lawyer in 1909 and unsuccessfully put their case to the Privy Council in London in 1913.

In 1969, they sued the provincial government for aboriginal rights, but lost. Lawyer Tom Berger, now a B.C. Supreme Court justice, took the appeal all the way to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The court split 3-3 on the question of aboriginal rights with the seventh judge deciding against the Nishga on a legal technicality.

But the strength of the Nishga case caused the federal government to reverse its position and begin negotiations with various native groups across Canada.

Negotiations with the Nishga, however, have dragged, primarily because of reluctance to talk on the part of the provincial government which first rejected the concept of Indian ownership in 1927 and has been doing so ever since.

Lack of progress from the present Social Credit government cost Nishga Chief Frank Calder his Atlin seat in the recent provincial election. Intent on sending a message to Victoria, a heavy Nishga vote for the New Democrat candidate defeated Calder who had represented the sparsely populated riding for all but four of the last 30 years.

The Nishga demands include regional self-government in the Nass, control of resource exploitation and compensation for non-Indian mineral, timber and fish extraction in the last 100 years.

Jimmy Gosnell, head of the Nishga Council, told a recent gathering in Terrace that whites should not be afraid of what Indians are after.

That reassurance underlined the misunderstandings and suspicions that have long affected relations since the two societies came together and still remain a barrier to a land claims settlement.

The Nishgas' first clash with white man's ways came with the arrival of the first Anglican missionaries in the 1860s. Steeped in rigid Victorian principles, the missionaries burned totem poles, forbade rituals and set up separate villages for those who converted to Christianity.

Nishga traditions evolved under the assault, but didn't die. Now a more enlightened Anglican Church, as well as having incorporated Nishga ritual with its own, supports the land claim and had a bishop bless the totem pole when it was raised here.

"Before, the church and Indian affairs believed we were worshiping idols in our totem poles," said Rev. Hubert McMillan, a Nishga ordained in 1976.

"It just wasn't so. The Church began to realize the poles as one of the strengths of our people."

Bruce Cottingham, a white adviser to the Aiyansh band council, says "one of the strengths of the Nishga people is their ability to take an institution and 'Indianize' it, to abosrb it rather than be railroaded by it."

That is nowhere more evident than in the advances made by school district 92, organized in 1976 to handle education in the Nass.

New elementary schools were built in Kincolith and Greenville, and the opening of the high school, which graduated its first 33 graduates in June, meant that for the first time students did not have to leave the valley to continue their education.

Three of the 33 teachers in the valley are Nishgas and there are nine Nishga teachers' aides.

School board chairman Larry Hoback says there has been more local input and the quality of education has improved since the school board replaced the federal department of Indian affairs in handling education.

"One of our mandates from the Nishga people is quality," he says. "That's what's been lacking for years."

Hoback, a Denver, Colo., native who moved to the area 11 years ago and has been adopted by the wolf tribe, says local administration allows schools to keep in closer touch with local problems like alcohol abuse.

"What we have to do is overcome a bad image of education itself. People think of education as something that tears you away from your parents."

Addict needles mailed in novel promotion

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — One Toronto publishing firm certainly has gone out of its way to make a "point."

McClelland and Stewart Ltd., in an effort to promote the new novel Needles, began its recent campaign by mailing hypodermic syringes to members of the news media.

In plastic containers and complete with attached hollow needles, several hundred of the disposable syringes have been sent through the mail to book-review editors of newspapers and magazines across the country.

The syringe — the type used by diabetices and heroin addicts — is accompanied only by a slip of paper which announces: "Needles is coming."

Needles, a courtroom drama set against the background of the Vancouver heroin trade, was written by William Deverell, a Vancouver lawyer, and selected as this year's winner of the $50,000 Seal First Novel Award.

Jack McClelland, president of McClelland and Stewart, said he knew about the promotion gimmick but had thought toy syringes would have been used.

"It's difficult for me to comment," he said. "Let's put it this way: It's what the book's about, though I agree there might have been better ways to promote it.

"I don't think they (the syringes) are dangerous weapons. They're used for all sorts of purposes, medicinal purposes. I think you can get them anywhere. I'm sure we didn't get them on prescription."

In Ontario, hypodermic syringes for insulin are available without prescription and distributed at the discretion of pharmacists under guidelines of the Ontario College of Pharmacists.

Bill Wensley, college registrar, said pharmacists are advised not to display syringes openly.

Now you can enjoy the flavour of Goose at a Special Price!

Treat your family to the naturally good taste of goose that Great Grandma use to enjoy. We have a booklet filled with roasting times, and all kinds of recipes that is yours when you buy one of these beautiful birds at any Woodward's Food Floor.

Young Gr. A Goose

Naturally fed on pasture feed and whole grains (not forced — no chemical supplements). Average weights 9 to 12 lbs. Fast frozen.

1.39 lb.

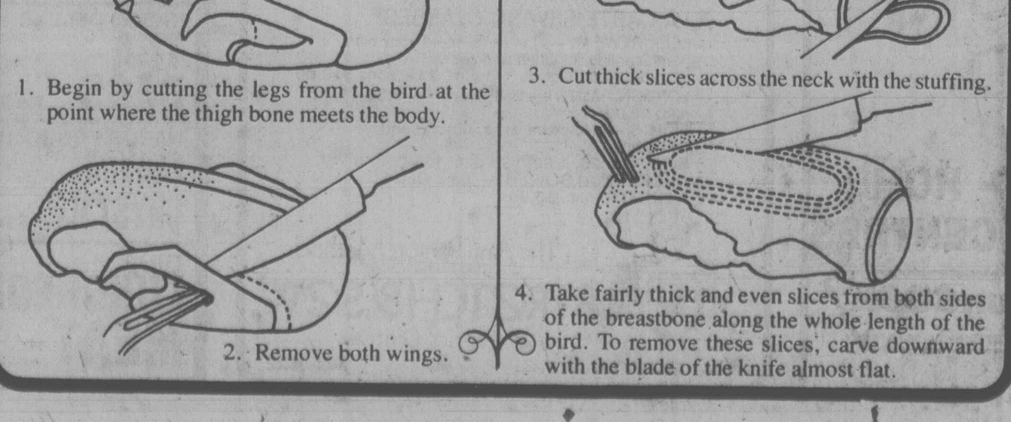
Personal Shopping Sept. 17th to 22nd. We reserve the right to limit quantities.

Apple-Orange Stuffing

6 cups day-old bread cubes
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups diced apples
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 cup diced orange sections
½ cup raisins
½ cup orange juice
½ cup chopped pecans
¼ cup melted fat

Combine all ingredients and toss lightly to mix. Makes enough stuffing for an 8 to 10 pound goose.

Carving a Goose



1. Begin by cutting the legs from the bird at the point where the thigh bone meets the body.
2. Remove both wings.
3. Cut thick slices across the neck with the stuffing.
4. Take fairly thick and even slices from both sides of the breastbone along the whole length of the bird. To remove these slices, carve downward with the blade of the knife almost flat.

jazz

By LEONARD FEATHER

In 1963, Dick and Maddie Gibson were satisfied with everything about life in Denver except for the lack of jazz. The problem was soon surmounted after the Gibsons had written letters to similarly deprived Coloradians, invited 10 musicians from New York, rented a hotel room in Aspen, charged the 200 friends who had answered the letters $25 a head to help defray costs.

The Gibsons at that point were the parents of two small sons, a daughter, their first jazz party and, two days later, a third son. The party has grown as relentlessly as the children. This year's event was budgeted at $82,000, drew close to 600 patrons at $300 per couple, and involved 50 musicians. The Gibson children, now teenagers or adults, have become avid jazz fans. There are presently a dozen unrelated jazz parties, all patterned along Gibson lines, organized with encouragement from the founding father: in Texas, Michigan, Arizona, even in Kingston, Jamaica, elements of a year-round party circuit have been building.

Held, like its eight immediate predecessors, at the sumptuous Broadmoor Hotel in Colorado Springs, Gibson's 17th annual gathering was probably the greatest yet, although the task of improving on perfection must be hazardous even for these mature and enthusiastic performers.

The party experience is unlike that of most American jazz festivals, where too often boozy, noisy audiences and long waits between sets to mount or dismount electronic gear become inhibiting factors. At Gibson's the music starts punctually and is all but continuous; the customers are attentive, sober, and seldom move from their seats in mid-set.

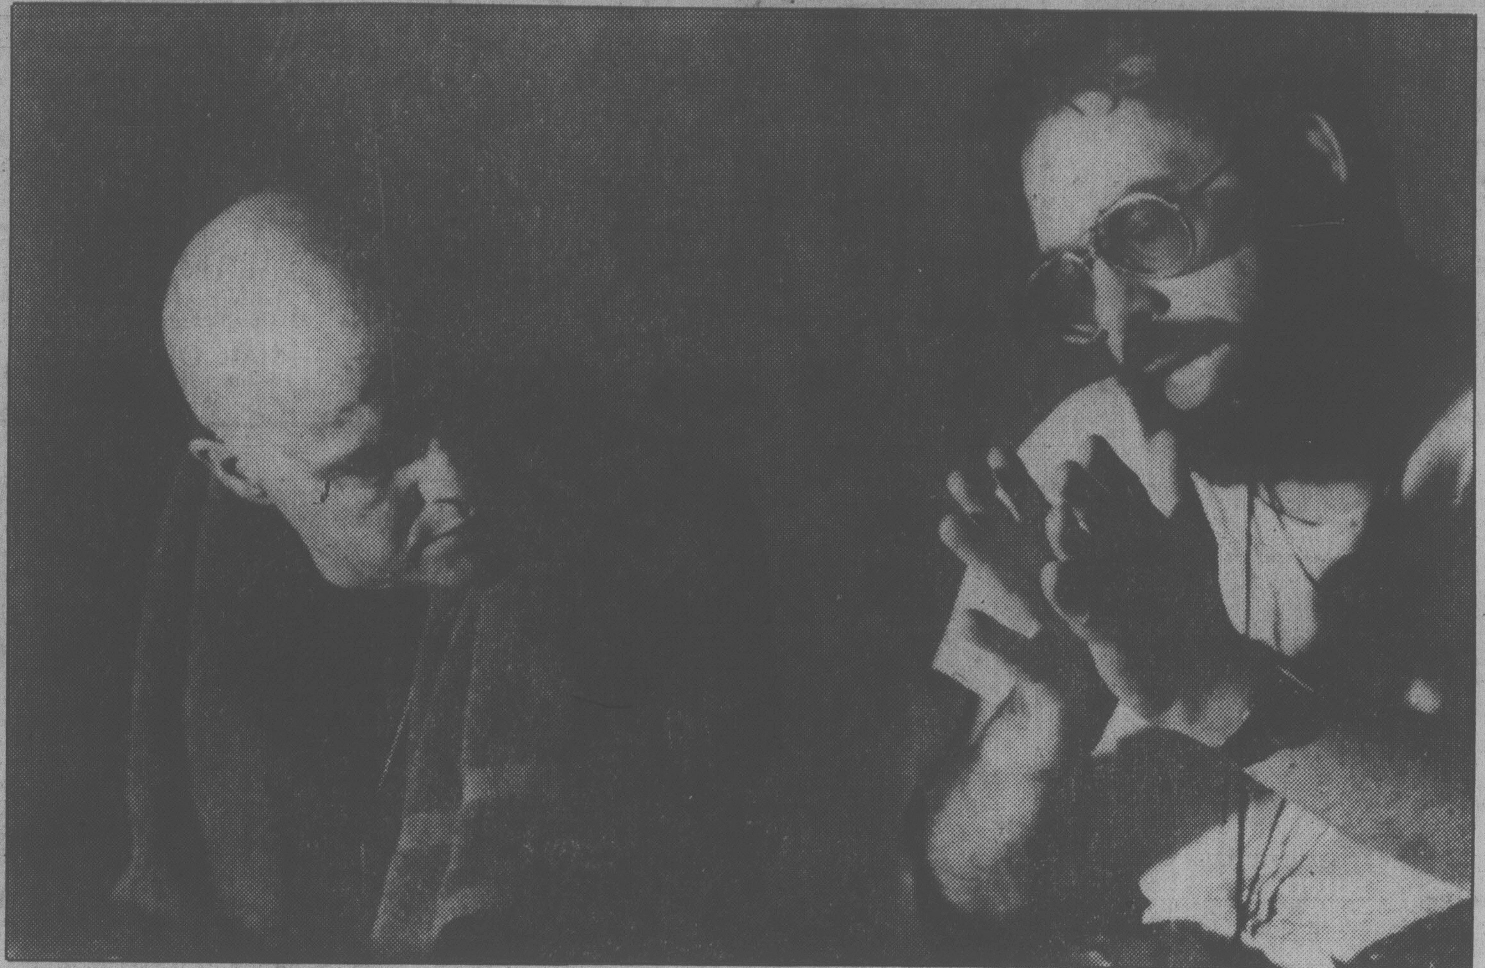
Of the 50 performers this year, 42 had partied for Gibson at least once before. Among the eight newcomers, two provided some of the weekend's most rewarding moments. Jay (Hootie) McShann, a rotund, Buddha-like pianist from Kansas City, played the blues as if he had invented the idiom, and delivered the nasal, declarative vocals on such tunes as Hootie's Ignorant Oil and Confessin' the Blues as if he were the reincarnation of Walter Brown, who sang them on the original records by McShann's swing era band. The tuxedoed and evening gowned crowd at the Sunday evening show rewarded McShann with three standing ovations.

John Collins, the guitarist who spent 13 years in the shadows of the Nat King Cole rhythm section, was the party's latest reclamation from oblivion. Like Joe Venuti, Maxine Sullivan and others whom Gibson brought back from obscurity, Collins simply needed the right exposure.

Gibson regards his sessions as basically instrumental. Hornblowers who care to burst into song are free to do so, but singers as such are rarely hired. This year, in addition to Joe Newman's Satchmo impression and vocals by Clark Terry, Ralph Sutton and Doc Cheatham, Maxine Sullivan materialized, small almost to invisibility, trimly gowned and neatly coiffed as ever, singing straight melody yet bringing to each tune something more than its inherent value.

Among the pleasant rituals of the party, there is the final set, during which Gibson every year takes to the mike for a robust vocal on I Ain't Got Nobody. After the jazzmen have packed their gear, two buses wait to take us on the 90-minute ride back to Denver, where most of us are put up in a block of elegant homes made available by Gibson's friends. Before we retire, the Gibsons provide the perennial boxes of fried chicken.

Next year the party will be similar, but inevitably one or two more of the great ones will have gone the way of Joe Venuti, Bobby Hackett, Willie the Lion, Frank Rosolino and George Barnes, who played some of their final gigs at the party. Gibson will find some tactful way to ease out a few regulars in order to bring in several newcomers; but Cliff Leeman, the drummer, who alone among this year's 50 has played all 17 parties, will almost certainly be back.



Director Coppola discusses scene with Brando on set of Apocalypse Now

Apocalypse next month

LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Francis Coppola confesses he is sick and tired of talking about his overexposed film Apocalypse Now.

Director-producer Coppola revealed his weariness during a press conference the day after the film's much-heralded North American premiere in New York last month.

Apocalypse Now arrives in Victoria and most other Canadian and U.S. cities next month, but the public has been satiated with months of advance stories.

Coppola's press conference was an attempt to make peace with the North American press, which he has called, among other things, "lying and degenerate."

At the Warwick Hotel in Manhattan he warily held court over a hotel banquet room stuffed full of movie critics.

Coppola started out by saying he was angry when rough screenings were reviewed in national magazines as the final product. (The movie was previewed for audiences in Minnesota, Atlanta, Los Angeles and entered as a work-in-progress at Cannes).

About 20 major changes have been made to the movie since Cannes, including adding narration by Michael Herr (author of the best-selling book about the American experience in Viet Nam, Dispatches).

Coppola defended showing different versions of the film in sneak previews and experimenting with several endings.

He says the press vindictively glossed over his accomplishments at Cannes.

"It was sort of like, well Francis went there and sort of got some unfavorable notices and incidently shared the prize."

Admitting he took some unfair shots at the press while in Cannes, Coppola said simply: "I'd like to be even."

Four years ago he started work on his eighth film — a definitive statement about the Viet Nam war that would also examine the moral issues behind all wars.

The original John Milius screenplay was revised by Coppola because it didn't explore subject matter of interest to him.

Although he borrowed ideas from the Joseph Conrad classic Heart of Darkness, the film was never meant to be an adaptation of the novel.

Filming began in the Phillippines in March 1976, but soon fell behind schedule.

Some big-name actors up for various roles backed out. The U.S. defence department refused to make available helicopters and other military equipment. A typhoon caused millions of dollars damage to sets.

Cast and crew suffered from the heat. Star Martin Sheen was hospitalized for more than six weeks about three-quarters of the way through production with a severe but unspecified illness rumored to be a hear attack.

When shooting ended in May 1977 the original $12 budget had inflated to $31 million, and all the publicity surrounding Apocalypse Now had taken its toll on Coppola.

He refuses to give details about the human side of filming and says he is deeply offended about "having my personal life spread out like some sheet of butter.

"It really has had a profound effect on me and I would imagine I will be a much shier person in the future.

"At certain times it scared me to death to be in the situation that I found myself."

His production company Omni Zoetrope Studios owns the entire picture, which he compares to owning the whole tree instead of just the apples.

Omni's exclusive international distribution and eventual television sales will recover costs and reap a substantial profit, he believes.

(The film is playing to sell out crowds since its release. Distributors United Artists announced gross receipts of more than $7 million during the first few weeks.)

Coppola says things he tackles in the future will be even more unorthodox and ambitious.

"I guess at this point I don't know how to do a thing that isn't going to be a big adventure."

Audiences in Victoria will see a 35 mm plain stereo print while in cities with70 mm equipment will view a deluxe version.

More than one million feet of film was shot making Apocalypse Now. By comparison, Coppola shot 300,000 feet of film making The Godfather, Part II.

Some scenes that relied heavily on special effects, such as a spectacular helicopter attack on a Viet Cong village, were shot with about nine cameras.

"It's so hard to set that up that you just roll all the cameras and when you're finished you roll a little longer to make sure that if something's going to blow up at the last minute you have it on film."

All the eccentricities depicted in the film — surfing and waterskiing during fighting, steaks and beer flown into combat zones for beach parties, psychadelic decorations on the helicopters, and death cards placed on the foreheads of North Vietnamese casualties — were all taken from real incidents.

The 40-year-old Coppola's mantle is decorated with Oscars picked up for both Godfather movies, but he says he isn't interested in academy awards.

He called the film a colossal collaboration between cast and crew.

Marlon Brando, who plays Colonel Kurtz, the renegade Green Beret Captain Williard is sent out to kill, was very much a part of the team.

"I would say Brando really contributed in his own eccentric way. He's an incredible man, he's a really intelligent man, he's totally eccentric.

"His one great thing is that he hates baloney, which he thinks most everything is. And if you can engage him, if he thinks you're part of something a little different or a little humanistic, he'll jump in and contribute."

Brando and Coppola decided Kurtz should remain as much a mystery as possible.

In the book, Kurtz talks and talks, but Conrad never explains what he says. "I realized that Kurtz in Heart of Darkness is sliced razor thin," Coppola said.

Conrad's Kurtz was a mystical figure whose voice was the instrument of his great power.

"By theatrical use of light and dark Brando was trying artfully to find just enough to give without apearing overstated."

Coppola refused to make any judgement on the finished film and onlyreluctantly wrote an introduction on the program put out by United Artists.

The introduction concludes: "It was my thought that if the American audience could look at the heart of what Vietnam was really like — what it looked like and felt like — then they would be only one small step away from putting it behind them."

Coppola said the movie should speak for itself.

"What the film really accomplishes, maybe the filmmaker is the last one to know."

Otto's got odds for Bethune flick

By RODERICK MANN
L. A. Times Syndicate

HOLLYWOOD — I don't wish to depress Donald Sutherland unnecessarily, but I am bound to report that Otto Preminger has every intention of beating him to the starting gate with a film of "Bethune" — which Sutherland has set his heart on making in China next year.

The idea of making a film about the Canadian doctor who became a national hero to the Chinese has haunted Sutherland for some years. Last time I talked with him he was just waiting for clearance from Peking.

Alas, Preminger already has it.

Over lunch in a converted bus in the English countryside, where he is filming Graham Greene's "The jhuman Factor," Preminger told me:

"I have been working on this picture for seven years, and now I have finally got permission to make it in China. I know all about Sutherland's plans. All I can say is I'll be happy to use him in my film, if he's interested. I think he'd be very good. I saw something he did on Canadian TV about Bethune, and it was excellent."

Sutherland has banked on the fact that, as a Canadian, he stood a better chance of getting permission to make the film in China than Preminger did. "Since Bethune," he told me, "the Chinese have been very favorably disposed toward us."

"That may be true," growled Preminger, digging into a large plate of ice cream. "But the fact remains that I am the one who has gotten permission to make the film there. I've done a great deal of research. I've even seen the film the Chinese themselves made about Bethune. Not good, I'm afraid. They used a Westerner who lives there; a man named Tannenbaum.

"He was obviously Jewish — that's not an anti-Semitic remark because I'm Jewish myself — but since Bethune was a Presbyterian minister's son, it was ridiculous.

"And the man who is writing my script — a Canadian named Sidney Gordon who now lives in East Berlin — probably knows more about Bethune than anyone living. So you can see I am not going in unprepared."

Preminger's film will be called "Blood on Wheels," since Bethune's major contribution to China's armies during the Sino-Japanese war was the formation of traveling blood banks.

"They've even promised me the use of their armies," said Preminger, "and I'm taking Japanese uniforms with me so that some of them can play Japanese."

Anything else?

"Yes, I've promised to give them a dupe negative of my film so that they can make any alterations they wish for its showing in China. The Chinese are a rather prudish race by our standards, you know. And since Bethune was married and divorced and had a rather colorful love life, they'll probably want to cut most of that out."

One thing is quite clear. The Chinese will not have to worry about shouts and abuse on the Preminger set, for the once terrible-e$7tOtto has quieted down a lot recently.

Now 72, the man Dyan Cannon refused to speak to again after making "Such Good Friends" — "the discord and mayhem on his set sent me reeling," she said — claims he cannot even remember what their row was about.

"I know I have this reputation for being tough," he said, "but it is not really true. I just demand that actors be on time and know their lines. That's all.

"Some years ago I was planning a film for which I wanted Elizabeth Taylor. So I went to Munich where she was making a film with Richard Burton. They entertained me royally at a three-hour lunch and then Elizabeth suddenly looked at her watch and said: 'My God, I ought to be on the set.' When she'd gone Richard said: 'One thing about Elizabeth — she's never on time for anything.' That was the end of that, as far as I was concerned.

"The truth is rows make good copy, so they get printed. But really, I am not so terrible-tempered. Sometimes. But not often.

On the way back to the set, he said:

"I get blamed for too many things. For instance, I was once visiting a school and the principal said: 'My secretary would very much like to meet you.' So I went into an office and a little woman stood up and said: 'Mr. Preminger, my name is Streisand. My daughter once auditioned for you for "St. Joan" and you didn't give her a part.'

"Perhaps not, madam," I said, "but look where your daughter is today and then remember where Jean Seberg is."

Guild promises gold

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Victoria Thearte Guild opens a new season this coming week and board members plan a real gold-panning operation.

It's their 50th anniversary year and they've dedicated it to good times and good box office.

The opener is Thursday at Langham Court, the cul de sac tucked away off Rockland Avenue between Linden and Moss.

And Neil Simons' The Sunshine Boys seems a quite appropriate send-off for a golden year.

Victoria Theatre Guild has grown steadily, with only one or two set-backs,from a small beginning in 1929 when it was organized by a group, mostly high school teachers (including the late widely-known H.S."Bunny" Hurn). It then had the somewhat rococo title, Mimes and Masquers Guild.

After the members got tired of the popular paraphrase, "Marms and Masters Guild" the group's title, following a cross-Canada trend of the early forties, became Victoria Little Theatre.

There was no permanent home in those days. Early members with long memories recall meeting in draughty warehouse lofts and other places where the proceedings were orchestrated by the drip-drap from leaky roofs into tin buckets.

Once or twice a season full-length shows were staged at the Empire Theatre (now the McPherson), the lower ballroom of the old Crystal Garden or the now vanished Shrine Auditorium.

Change in VLT fortunes came when it found an "angel" and was able to purchase the property it was currently using as rehearsal and meeting space — the present Langham Court Theatre. Voluntary work by members brought about the first necessary alterations in the building which was formerly the coach house of a nearby mansion.

In the late forties an ideological division occurred, break-away members forming the Victoria Players Guild. Reunited a couple of years later as the Victoria Theatre Guild and Dramatic School, the organization found stability and has maintained itself in the black ever since.

Out of its ranks have come many successful actors and technical people who have given valuable service to this and other communities. It has proved itself, especially with this summer's school session in aspects of community theatre work, to be a true resource centre.

New policy goes behind canvas

A new policy concerning acquisition has been brought in to enrich the educational uses of the University of Victoria art collection.

The policy will emphasize the artistic process by following the artist's progress from sketch through to finished work.

Policy results can be seen in a current exhibition of contemporary Canadian artists on view at UVic's Maltwood Gallery until Sept.27. It is demonstrated in new works by E.J. Hughes, A.W.Jones and Max Maynard.

Also included in the UVic exhibit are pieces demonstrating the major artifact restoration program that has been underway since 1975.

Recent additions to the Maltwood Collection reflect two themes that run through the original bequest to UVic. Aside from those objects that mirrored the far-afield travels of Catherine and John Maltwood, both before and during retirement, curator Martin Segger points out, the Maltwoods were involved in collecting closer to home. For instance works by Emily Carr, W.P. Weston and C.J. Collins and local ceramicists were purchased by them.

In maintaining this theme, new acquisitions include works by Stella Langdale and ceramics by B.C. pioneer craft potter Alex Ebring.

The gallery is open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

At the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria the delayed Tom Forrestall show went up this week. Originally scheduled to open Aug.29, the Maritime painter's 40 variously shaped canvases went missing en route here from their home in the Owens Art Gallery of New Brunswick.

Frantic fun soon at the Mac

Its 11th summer successfully completed in Whitehorse, the vaudeville type variety show, Frantic Follies, comes to McPherson Playhouse Friday and Saturday next.

The show's intention is to reflect the verve and enthusiasm of the original stampeders to the Klondike. It's a romp through the era that includes ballads, high-kicking dancing girls, Robert Service poetry and music, jokes and skits typical of the era.

Portraying the gold rush fever is a cast of professional actors, dancers and musicians.

The rococo elegance of the McPherson provides a perfect setting for this particular revue. It was originally a link in the Pantages vaudeville chain. Alexander Pantages, who gave his name to theatres he built up and down the coast and across Western Canada, erected his first theatres in the Yukon.

There will be three performances of Frantic Follies; Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Meanwhile, Howard Dyck, host of CBC's popular classical program, Mostly Music, will be on stage at the University Centre Auditorium, Sunday Sept.23, to introduce the opening event in the first CBC Festival Victoria.

The afternoon performance will bring together the Vancouver Bach Choir and the University of Victoria Choir in a presentation of Maurice Durufle's splendid Requiem for solo voices, chorus, orchestra and organ.

Chorus, soloists and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra will perform the work under the baton of George Corwin.

The occasion will also be marked by the first public use of the recently installed Clearihue organ. However the organ's role is a minor one in this work and its official introduction is to come at a later date.

In addition to the Requiem, Corwin will conduct the orchestra in a performance of Pelleas and Melisande by Gabriel Faure. The Bach Choir, one of Canada's major choral groups, will perform under conductor Bruce Pullan, a selection of works by Canadian composers. Included will be songs by Victoria resident Bernard Naylor and the world premiere of a work by Harry Freedman entitled Green ... Blue ... White ...

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, September 16, 1979
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on determining goal, direction, deciding what is of value as contrasted to sham. Pisces, Virgo and the number 7 figure prominently. Romance, creativity, emotional responses dominate. See places, people in realistic light.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Practical matters, including grade and quality of material, should take precedence over "romantic notions." Challenge, responsibility, the building of secure base—these are highlighted. Capricorn, Cancer natives could play key roles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish rather than initiate project. Ideas are plentiful—key is to be selective. Restless neighbor or relative wants attention. Give it, but don't reward "bad behavior." Aries, Libra natives figure in scenario. You'll have chance to improve display, distribution of product.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spotlight on recovery, locating what had been lost or stolen. You make "marvelous," new contact—you will get chance to put original ideas to work. Be daring enough to be a pioneer. Exercise independence of thought, action.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Intuition is sharply-honed; you teach, learn, detect and experience excitement of seeing hunch materialize into fact. Aquarius, Cancer and another Leo play porminent roles. Highlight independence, pioneering concepts, courage to imprint your own style. You'll win!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Open lines of communication—someone wants to tell you something of importance. Know it and respond accordingly. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play key roles. Diversify, be versatile, give full rein to intellectual curiosity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on romance, friends, desires, ability to strengthen your own position. Leo, Scorpio, Aquarius natives could play significant roles. Take a chance on your own capabilities. You can overcome odds and emerge victorious!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good lunar aspect coincides now with travel plans, publishing projects, educational pursuits and travel. Major domestic adjustment is part of personal scenario. Family member makes major concession.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You get to bottom of mystery. Perceive "hidden message." Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Financial structure, investments, private agreement with partner or mate dominate scenario. What you have been seeking becomes available.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Past obligations come into focus—you are able to solidify legal agreement. Avoid rushing to judgment. Listen and observe. Gather information. Be aware of hints, subtle nuances. Permit partner or mate to fully express views.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Popularity builds as you serve as reliable intermediary between opposing factions. You finish project—employment picture can be as bright as you desire. Strive to be knowledgeable on various points of view. You will soon see why!

IF SEPTEMBER 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a perfectionist and have tendency to brood. You are perceptive, romantic, creative and tend to see people as you wish they could be. Thus, you fall victim to self-deception. It is almost impossible for others to fool you, but you can do a good job of it yourself. Your idealism plainly gets in the way of reality. Key is to heed inner voice, to steer clear of those "psychic vampires," who take and take with no thought of giving anything in return. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, September 17, 1979

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Transaction is completed—you gain greater sense of security. Property, home area, family, purchase of essential material—these command spotlight. Someone wants you to carry a burden—the same person has you marked for a Grade "A" sucker—expecting you to give up something for nothing. Foil those expectations!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Idea pays off—chemistry blends as you get together with "right person." Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently. Stress originality, independence of thought, action. Study Taurus message for valid hints. Love will make you happy!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Intuition pays off, you could strike pay dirt. Aqua[illegible]s, Leo and another Cance[illegible] play roles in your persona[illegible]io. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Judgment is on target—so is timing. Know it, be direct, confident, willing to put beliefs, opinions on the line. You will have reason to celebrate. Good news comes from afar—self-esteem soars. Accept good fortune without kicking toe in sand!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Hospital visit could be on agenda. Temporary delay or confinement works in your favor. Don't force, rush, cajole, push or chide. You get your way by demonstrating sincerity, by being thorough—and expressing views in calm, intelligent manner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New approach to work procedures brings positive results. Highlight greater independence of thought, action. Dependents, pets command more than usual attention. Be sure that you also take care of own basic needs. Leo could play key role.

IF SEPTEMBER 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intense, dynamic, dramatic, sincere and some persons consider you overbearing. You have keen sense of justice and responsibility. Nothing happens to you in lukewarm fashion—it is hot or cold, all or nothing Members of opposite sex find you a challenge. Some people seem either afraid or determined to reform you. In actuality, you are a charitable and a passionate person. Cancer, Capricorn natives play key roles in your life. You succeed in dealing with older individuals. You do best when in business for yourself.

B.C. air crash toll dips despite recent rash

By VIC PARSONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Despite a rash of air crashes in the last three weeks, the number of persons killed in aviation smashups in British Columbia this year is far below the toll taken in 1978.

Good weather this year is given much of the credit by some air industry spokesmen for the improvement. They note that the province's capricious climate and rugged terrain, coupled with pilot inexperience, makes B.C. a treacherous place to fly.

Late this week, there had been 41 deaths due to air crashes in B.C. this year, compared with 110 in 1978. Last year's final tally was 121.

The 1978 figures include 43 deaths in the crash of a Pacific Western Airlines jet at Cranbrook in February and 11 deaths in the crash of an Airwest float plane in Vancouver's Coal Harbor.

Until the end of August, the 1979 fatalities total was also less than during the same period in 1977, with 29 this year against 32 two years ago. The 1979 figure includes seven killed Aug. 30 at Prince Rupert's Digby Island and six killed April 19 at Nanaimo's Cassidy airport.

But September has seen four fatal crashes — at Savary Island near Powell River Sept. 3 with two deaths; near Skeena Crossing Sept. 5, claiming the lives of three Californians; at Gilford Island near Campbell River on Sept. 6 in which six died; and near Port Alberni on Sept. 9 when a helicopter pilot from Sasktachewan was killed.

An American helicopter pilot on his way from Alaska to Texas has also been missing in the Fort St. John area of northeastern B.C. since Sept. 2.

Major Wayne Stuart, with the defence department rescue co-ordination centre in Victoria, says B.C.'s rapidly changing weather conditions combined with its mountains make the province a more hazardous place to fly than other parts of the country.

"You get people with little experience flying down valleys who are trapped in bad weather and can't get out," he says. "This is not a good area for inexperienced people to be flying in."

Ron Heath, executive-director of the B.C. Aviation Council, which includes private aircraft owners, flying clubs and airlines in its membership, says pilots "overflying their capability" in bad weather are often the victims in air crashes.

The combination of inexperience with ill-starred efforts to manoeuvre through mountain valleys is lethal, he said. Rescue officials said the Sept. 5 crash near Skeena Crossing, northeast of Terrace in west-central B.C., was that kind of accident — a Cessna 206 carrying three Californians crashed into a mountainside.

Heath says B.C.'s flying conditions are unlike those elsewhere in Canada because of the terrain and the unforgiving climate. He says he knows eastern pilots who will not venture west of the Rockies.

Yet flying is often the most practical way to travel in B.C. for the same reasons.

"Because our terrain goes up and down like a toilet seat, flying is a good way to travel," he says. The result is that B.C. has a disproportionately large number of pilots.

Heath argues that the best weapon to combat flying accidents in B.C. is better education, retraining, and what he calls airmanship or "common sense in flying."

He says when he learned to fly, he was taught to look for places to land in case of engine failure. "You don't hear about that any more."

A transport department survey of 906 accidents between 1976 and 1978 seems to indicate that human performance can be improved. In 800 cases, the survey found that pilot or co-pilot handling of the aircraft was a contributing factor — either major or minor — in accidents.

In some, pilot involvement as a factor was simply in reacting to a malfunction in the aircraft. Weather was the next most frequent factor, mentioned in 179 cases.

The transport department does offer seminars and puts out an aviation safety bulletin for pilots, but there is no compulsory retraining requirement after licences are granted.

"It's comparable to driving a car," says Steve Ryback, a ministry information officer in Vancouver. "The opportunity is there to take courses but whether or not individuals take advantage of them is another thing.

"You can't legislate safety on individuals," Ryback says.

Both Heath and Stuart say pilots should once again be required to carry emergency locators in case they are forced down.

The locators were compulsory in all aircraft until three years ago when some lithium batteries in the locators exploded. But while improvements have been made to the batteries, the legal requirement has not yet been re-established.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dissident tradesmen and leaders of the International Woodworkers of America have agreed to hold a special conference to air their differences.

The tradesmen staged wildcat walkouts during and after contract negotiations during the summer to protest wage adjustments which were lower than those won by industry benchmen who supervise the maintenance of saws in sawmills.

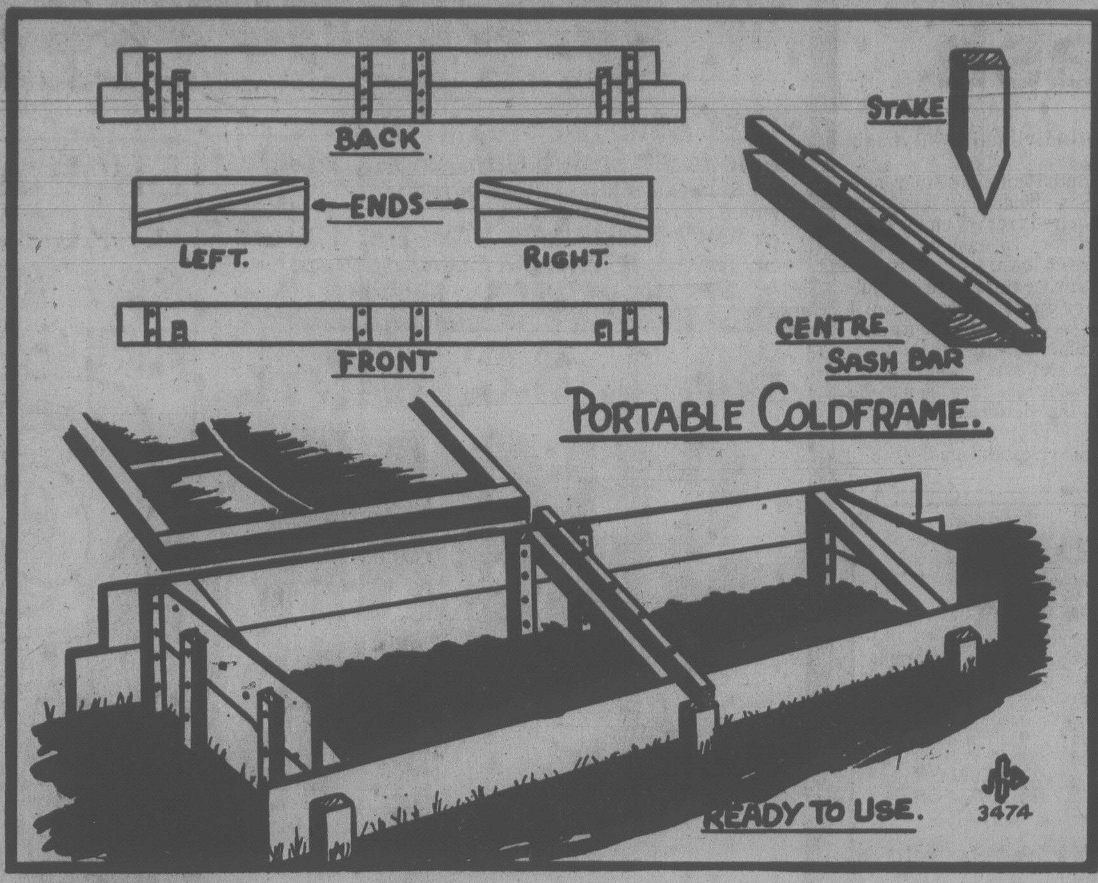
Coldframe extends season



GARDENING

Jack Beastall

Young couples who have been successful in producing vegetables during the spring and summer are now seriously thinking about a coldrame to extend the productive season over winter.

Having designed, built, and operated coldframes for more than 50 years here on the west coast, my advice is to start with a simple structure and find out from experience its capabilities under the conditions existing in your own garden.

The purpose of a colframe is to protect plants from the elements during a period of the year not suited to outdoor culture. The frame is not intended to be a miniature hothouse, nor is heat needed for the kind of frame-vegetables we grow here over winter. Most would survive in the open rows if protected from winter rains, sharp frosts, and cold winds, as we learned to our amazement when the ventilated glass cloches were first introduced to local gardeners.

Some beginners are thinking about thermostatically controlled heating cables set in the soil. Forget these for the present. They are expensive to buy, expensive to operate, and installation in any municipality must conform to the electrical code.

The majority of gardeners think of plastic film for the frame covers, believing it to be cheap and durable. As a shield from rain plastic film is effective, but it does not retain heat, it perishes rapidly in sunlight and needs frequent replacement, it does rot form a barrier against low temperatures, and it soon collapses under weight of snow.

Discarded window sash, available from house wrecking firms, are the cheapest and most durable covers, lasting for many years if reasonably handled and carefully stored when not in use. The beginner will have enough problems to solve without the added difficulties that appear when plastic film is used.

In my estimation the best frame for the beginner is the portable type illustrated here. It has many attributes worthy of consideration.

It is not a fixed frame. It can be easily moved and used against a sunny wall or fence during fall and winter; in February it can be set on a raised well-drained bed for early vegetable sowings, and later it can cover three or four rows of vegetables in the early spring garden, then be placed over tomatoes, or used through the summer for growing semi-tropicals such as okra and sweet peppers. When not in use it packs flat against the wall of a carport, garage, or basement.

The two-sash frame illustrated was constructed from scrap shiplap, odd pieces of two by four and two by two, in four separate sections, front, back, and two end pieces with sloping two by fours to support the sash. Length can be changed by adding more covers, and the depth adjusted to suit the height of plants being grown.

The removable sash bar is made from a two by four with a projecting two by two dividing strip attached, and can be laid aside when digging, sowing, planting, or cultivating. It is not advisable to attach the frame covers with hinges as these prevent the sash from being tilted according to wind direction when ventilation is needed.

To set up the frame, three long stakes are driven into the soil in a straight line and the back section leaned against the stakes. The two end sections are fitted between the cleats on the back section and the back straightened against the stakes.

The front section is set in place with the end pieces between the cleats, and three more short stakes driven to hold it firmly in place.

The sash bar is then placed between the centre cleats which keep it in place and a sash is tested for fit. The frame is squared by pushing the back section, or the front section, to the left or right until the sash slides freely on the bars.

If old boards or planks are used in the construction be sure to nail plaster laths over the cracks between the boards otherwise cold draughts will enter and damage the plants. Shiplap or tongue-and-grove boards prevent these draughts.

Before setting up the frame against a wall or fence, remove the top soil from an area a little larger than the frame. Break up the subsoil, adding stones and rubble for better drainage.

Mix the top soil with an equal quantity of compost to make a bed about eight inches deep and replace it over the broken subsoil and rubble. Set the frame on top of this slightly raised bed.

When using a coldframe remember that ventilation is more important than high temperatures. Keep the sash raised on two by four blocks in all mild weather, increasing or decreasing the opening according to outside temperature and wind.

In frosty gardens close the covers as sun leaves the frame and at dusk use a double layer of old sacking or a discarded floor rug over the coverss to hold in the warmth. Remove as soon as daylight breaks.

If a winter cold spell with snow is forecast have a few pieces of wood or shiplap handy to lay over the top of the covers for added protection.

It will take a while to learn how to use a coldrame in all types of weather. We each make mistakes at the start, but those mistakes provide lessons to be learned, and each lesson we mastered made the operation of a coldrame more successful.

$50 gold pieces go like hotcakes

WINNIPEG (UPC) — Despite the steep selling price of $455.99, only about 100 of 1,000 recently-minted $50 Canadian gold bullion coins remain to be sold.

The sales were brisk even when customers found that the provincial government is getting its ounce of flesh — by levying its 5 per cent sales tax on the coins.

BULGARIA IS AN OLD COUNTRY

Young in outlook

By ERIC BOURNE

Bulgaria is an old country — with a young outlook.

Take Manol Chankov, for example. Manol, who comes from an orchard-rich region in the south, is Bulgaria's oldest citizen. Amazingly hale at 111, he recently commented on his advanced years for a Sofia newspaper:

"A man's not old while he stays young at heart."

Bulgaria, which is noted for the longevity of its people, seems to survive by this precept, too.

One of Bulgaria's two historic turning points came in 1878, when a Russian czar delivered the country from 500 years of barbaric Ottoman domination.

The second turning point came with the close of the Second World War, which brought Soviet domination to all of Eastern Europe, including Bulgaria.

Today, Moscow has no more unequivocal ally in Eastern Europe than Bulgaria. The alliance is the "immovable cornerstone" of everything concerning domestic and foreign policy.

Young outward-looking Bulgarians, restless for a less ideologically disciplined environment, often champ at communist society's restraints. But for many members of the older generations, Russian basically still is very much the "great Slavic brother."

Bulgaria is a small country, but its geographical position vis-a-vis the Black Sea, the Bosporus and the Mediterranean is of great significance to the U.S.S.R.

The latter has rewarded unquestioning alliegance by underwriting Bulgaria's industrialization on a massive scale, undoubtedly bringing it to the threshold of 20th-century technology.

A strict Soviet model? Yes. Instrinsically, however, the old heritage survives.

Even the regime shows pride in the more purely "Bulgarian" and European identity of the past. It has, for example, fostered painstaking archaeological exploration of fabled Thracian treasures and marks of an earlier civilization which have been shown off in recent years in the West.

Lisbon intriguing city with Roman ambience

By JOHN CUMMINGS

LISBON — During the Second World War, the narrow winding alleys that pass for streets provided the backdrop for international intrigue. Every B movie produced in the early '40s portrayed Allied and Nazi agents in neutral Lisbon vying with missions of derring-do, the outcome of which would always "decide the course of the war."

Today, the only courage required in the streets is driving a car through the Barrio Alto, or old section, as the music of the fado — Portugal's soulful music made famous by Amalia Rodrigues — drifts from the cabarets.

It is still an intriguing capital. It has, says one guidebook, the look of San Francisco and the ambience of Rome, with tiny restauarants featuring vintage wine and seafood cooked delicately in olive oil. The only difference is the prices.

While inflation is rising at 35 percent throughout the continent, it is still possible to order a four-course dinner for two with wine and dessert for as little as $10 in Portugal. And a businessman's hotel like the Borges, in the centre of the city's business heart and gourmet restaurants, offers single rooms facing out on the busy square for only $12. Portugal is, in short, what Spain was only a few years ago — but is no more.

With the possible exception of Greece, Portugal is the last bargain left in Western Europe. Yet, even by Portuguese standards, prices are 20 percent higher than just a year ago.

Portugal, in fact, offers the best of Europe in microcosm. But it's had its problems.

The country still is recovering from the revolution of April 1974, when the last vestiges of the Salazar regime were overthrown. And then there is a geographic dilemma that squeezes the tiny country of 10 million into the corner of the Iberian peninsula, leaving Portugal out of the mainstream of touring Americans and grasping desperately for the tourist dollar.

As a result, Portugal is trying hard to please. There are tours that offer a rental car and stays throughout the country in state-run pousadas (the Portuguese equivalent of the Spanish parado).

These tours, ranging from as little as $175 per person for one week, $350 per person for two weeks plus air fare, can be arranged through T.A.P., the Portuguese airline, or most travel agents. TWA, the only American airline to fly nonstop from New York to Lisbon, offers other tours.

Rates for rental cars are equally attractive, but be advised that, while the tab is low for almost everything else, gasoline costs about $2.50 per gallon — and is going up daily. For some Portuguese workers that can be a day's wage, which explains why the prices of most things are still so low. Your favorite rose, Mateus or Lancer's and even some better ones they don't export, sell for $2 a bottle. But you'll never go wrong ordering the vinho de casa or house wine.

Consider, for example, the cost of jewelry. Earrings and bracelets, made of 19-carat gold (not 14-carat, as in most other countries), can be purchased for as little as $40 to $50. Just about any jewelry store here offers these items, but the fun place to look is in the ancient kalfama, the only section of the city not destroyed by the earthquake of 1755.

The streets here are wide enough only for a horse and wagon, and many are even more narrow. One shop, the Rel'jaria Central on Rua San Miguel, offers unique bargains. (Until recently, the law required that all goods offered for sale be at least 19 carat. Most places still follow that, but be sure before you buy.) And just across the tiny street is a restaurante tipico, where you are served such Portuguese favorites as caldo verde (a potato and cabbage soup) and grilled sardines along with wines and a caramel custard for dessert. Price for two: about $6.

Lisbon, it is often said, is not the biggest capital of Europe nor the most beautiful. But one need only tour the Alfamuwi and visit the San Jeronimo Monastery to savor vest-pocket beauty that will match anything Spain has to offer.

And for only about $1 round trip, you can travel by commuter train to the nearby Costa do Sol and the resorts of Cascais and Estoril (the Las Vegas of Portugal). And high above both sits Sintra, where the kings spent their summers in a hilltop palace that dominates the surrounding countryside.

It is a fairly long, and mostly winding, drive to the top, where the Pena Palace is situated. From its ramparts, one can see Lisbon 20 miles to the south, the ocean to the west and the rolling, wooded countryside.

But one of the most unforgettable moments in Sintra is dining in the Palacioa Seteais, a onetime palace converted into a hotel and what may be the best restaurant in Portugal. A close second is not far away on the beach at Guincho, where the pounding Atlantic surf virtually surrounds you as you dine, and from the giant windows of the Guincho hotel you can see the cliffs of Cabo de Roca, the western tip of the European continent. "It makes you want to run out and yell, 'Healthcliff!' " said one diner as the sun set into the Atlantic.

A look at any map will tell you that driving the length and breadth of Portugal would not take a great deal of time. The favorite spot of the vacationers in almmost every season, is the Algarve, in the south. And north of Lisbon are countless fishing villages like Peniche and Nazare, just to mention two of the best known. Here you can watch the fishermen mending their nets and their women sitting by the wharf knitting lace. (That material is not as plentiful as it used to be, but is still a bargain here when you can find it.)

Only two hours by car from Lisbon is the walled city of Obidos, a mini-Toledo with a pousada and a fine restaurant, as well as tiny shops that offer fishermen's all-wool sweaters for as little as $15. Obidos has been described as the most picturesque city in Portugal. It is a short distance from the ocean (just about everything in Portugal is) and at the foot of pine-covered mountains, the type that cover much of the interior of Portugal.

Obidos does not have the grandeur of Toledo, but it would be an understatement to say that to miss it is to miss the true Portugal.

Charleston: Garden fragrant with scents

ON THE GO
with Jerry Hulse

CHARLESTON, S.C. — It drips with Spanish moss and is grown over with jasmine, honeysuckle, magnolias, crepe myrtle and crawling fig vine. Magnificent homes 300 years and older line Charleston's cobbled streets and narrow, tree-shaded alleys.

Charleston has a refinement that escapes the eye in other cities today; it is one of those rare moments that rings strongly in the mind — a city perfumed with the fragrance of dozens of blooms and washed with breezes that blow up from the Ashley River.

Before the Revolution, Charleston was called Little London and the "darling of the British crown." Its wealth grew from indigo, rice and cotton and its women dressed in Paris fashions.

Then the ravages of earthquake, fire and two wars left a legacy of poverty and struggle.

In 1776, the issue of war with Britain was met in Charleston when a Colonial garrison repelled the enemy in the first decisive victory of the Revolution. Later it was from Charleston that the first shot of the Civil War was heard. Afterward, with slave labor ended and the disappearance of cotton and rice, Charleston languished.

Pre-Revolutionary homes fell into disrepair; ancestors of many of the present owners were "too poor to paint, too proud to whitewash."

Still, Charleston held tenaciously to its properties — the old homes, the churches, forts and plantations. As a result, today, Charleston is among the nation's best preserved cities. It has been called the "cultural capital of the American South" and the "most civilized town in the world."

Until recently, though, it was known also as America's "best-preserved secret."

Change took place a couple of years ago when Italian composer Gian Carlo Menotti chose Charleston as the setting for what has since been described as the world's most comprehensive art festival.

Called Spoleto (after the town in Italy where the festival originated), the yearly event features music, drama, opera, dance, film, ballet, jazz and the visual arts during a two-weeks-plus event in late springtime.

Spoleto Festival U.S.A. is set in Charleston's luxurious gardens and theatres, and even on an island. It brings together scores of artists, among them talented musicians recruited from schools and colleges across the nation. Their music is heard in historical Dock Street Theatre, in parks and Charleston's magnificent old mansions.

During candlelight concerts shadows play on 14-foot-high ceilings and one is returned to those moments of Charleston's earlier splendor.

Four of the homes remain open to visitors year-round. Heyward-Washington House, with its period antiques, provided shelter for George Washington during his visit to Charleston in 1791. A few blocks away, ladies of the Historic Charleston Foundation lead visitors through the Nathaniel Russell house with its flying staircase and oval music room.

Hundreds of mansions and other structures occupy an 860-acre parcel in historic Charleston. While the majority are privately owned, not a screw may be turned without an official nod from the Historical Foundation that presides over the preservation of Charleston's priceless legacy.

Vacant since 1970, the 25-room Rhett Aiken home at Judith and Elizabeth streets was acquired recently as a museum.

Built in 1818, it features half-tester beds, gaslight fixtures, whale oil chandeliers and a floor-to-ceiling painting of Harriett Lowndes, wife of South Carolina's then governor, William Aiken.

Curator Kenneth Jones figures the bill for restoring the old mansion will come close to $500,000.

Only a few blocks away, DuBose Heyward chose the old tenement area of Catfish Row for his novel, Porgy. It was followed by the Gershwin-Heyward folk opera, Porgy and Bess.

Though no longer a tenement, Catfish Row survives, featuring a knickknack shop called Porgy and a ladies' shop called Bess Horsedrawn carriages deliver visitors through the city while motorized tours take in the citadel, the carrier Yorktown, Ft. Sumter, Magnolia and Boone Hall plantations, Cypress Gardens and Middleton Place with its sculptured gardens, fountains and reflecting pools.

Nearly all of Charleston is a garden, fragrant and green with jasmine, wisteria, daphne, palmettos, azaleas, dogwood, redbud, silverbell, sweet pepperbrush, mimosa, chinaberry and red buckeye.

The Vendue Inn in the heart of old Charleston is perfumed by blooms that grace its door. Here Evelyn and Morton Needle have transformed a 180-year-old warehouse into Charleston's most charming public inn. Each of its 18 rooms with their tester and four-poster beds are decorated differently.

Rather than numbers, the name of prominent South Carolinians appear on the doors. In the small, tidy lobby a portrait of Andrew Jackson greets arriving guests. And only steps away, in an elegant, indoor courtyard, complimentary wine and cheese are served to guests of an afternoon. On occasion it is accompanied by chamber music performed by small groups rounded up by the hosts. During the rest of the day coffee and tea are poured in the little courtyard with its spiral staircase and hanging planters.

Rates at the Vendue are $48 a day single and $53 double, that includes a continental breakfast.

And then there is Battery Carriage House: set in a walled garden behind wrought-iron gates, it is another pre-Civil War mansion.

Furnished in 18th-century style, the inn's dozen room are priced from $48 single to $53 double. Additionally, a couple of suites are available in this mansion that faces the gardens of White Point and Charleston's historic Battery.

Rates include a continental breakfast consisting of coffee, juice and the choice of cheesecake or English muffins buried in strawberry jam.

A complimentary bottle of wine is delivered daily to guests, and bicycles for touring the town are provided as well.

Not far from Old Scots Presbyterian Church, David and Suzanne Redd host guests at Swordgate, an 18th-century inn with five guest rooms: $44 single, $48 double.

Other accommodations are up for grabs at the fashionable Mills Hyatt House, a 230-room hostelry that combines modern conveniences with antebellum refinements.

Singles start at $45 a day and doubles at $55. Candles, carnations and crystal await the diner in the Barbados Room and gaslights flicker just outside the door.

Holidays by Wardair®
GO WHEN THE PRICE IS LOW LOW LOW

A November to remember...
A winter holiday is not beyond your budget. The secret is to go when the price is low. And Holidays by Wardair has a warm place for you to go this November, when prices are lowest—Hawaii.

In November, Hawaiian beaches are just as sandy and skies are just as blue. You can work on your tan and your Christmas shopping list at the same time. In fact, with the money you save, you can even get a good start on your Christmas shopping.

In November the only thing that changes is the price. You still get the same "Wardair Class" service our passengers enjoy all year round—delicious hot meals, individually served on china dinnerware, chateau wines, liqueurs, bar service, tea, coffee, juice, milk or soft drinks—all at no additional cost.

In November you still fly non-stop to Hawaii aboard one of our fleet of wide-bodied aircraft.

In November, you get more for your money. So ask Thomas Cook to help you plan a November to remember with Holidays by Wardair.

Women find pleasure strolling Paris streets

By EVELYN KIERAN

PARIS — Ever since Eve, women have found particular pleasure in spending long hours just strolling a busy street, critiquing the things so artfully displayed in shining windows.

AND FEW streets in the world offer more allure than the Rue Faubourg Ste. Honore in Paris. Here, in the space of a few kilometres are more feminine — and some masculine — beautiful things to wear, carry, display, and own than any place else on Earth.

ORIGINALLY home of the great French couturiers, it is now mainly a showcase for their exquisite wares. The actual work is done in back rooms in lower rent districts. But the street itself is such a magnet for the fashionable — and the would-be fashionable — that just strolling its length on a sunny Saturday is an experience that would make Alice's Wonderland seem drab by contrast.

JUST LOOK at the elegant couple crossing the street. Her outfit is uniform of the day in Paris.

WELL-CUT blazer over a pure silk shirt, worn with a simple, well-fitted skirt swirling above boots of the softest leather imaginable. The costume is duplicated by hundreds of women, the only difference the texture of the blazer — tweed here, velvet there. The women nod and smile rather severely at each other like members of some secret sorority.

HER ESCORT is dressed equally casually, and correctly, and expensively. They look as though they can afford to do more than window shop here.

JUST turning the corner ahead is a younger couple. Also in uniform. Her blue jeans so tight you wonder how she can breathe. Her heels so high you know they won't be walking very far. Dark glasses, big bag. His loose leather jacket the kind of luxury that bears no price tag.

BUT IT IS the shops themselves that attract. Lanvin — on two sides of the street. The famed Hermes with classic silk scarves, leather of incredible luxury and a red-fox coat that surely carries the name of some glamorous movie star.

THE SHOPS of Yves St. Laurent . . . on the Right Bank this time, but filled with clothes of such subtle colors and cut that one must try them on to see the excellence of their lines.

GUCCI, a transplant from Rome, draws both men and women to its shadowed depths. Shoes, bags, wallets, belts, the finest in leather anywhere. with prices to match.

THEN Guerlain, one of the oldest fragrance houses in Paris. Roses here and jasmine. And all the little expensive things that make simple clothes radiant.

ONE WINDOW is jammed with oh-so-real mannequins, looking for all the world like part of a gypsy encampment. Not one but two, three shirts, tucked into the floating-over skirts of yards and yards of fabric, some with ruffles. Strings of beads, highly polished boots, both long and tucked in at the ankles, wild hair flowing madly in a make-believe breeze. It is the look of the moment.

THERE SEEMS to be no end to the boutiques. No end to the myriad beauties offered in their windows. No end to the interest of the onlookers — and no bottoms to the purses of those who buy.

NEVER MIND you can't afford even a single bibelot. You are rich just to be here. There is no charge just to look and enjoy. Envy if you will.

Entering the world of classical Japan

By MICHAEL CARLTON

KYOTO, Japan — Stepping off the bustling streets into this Japanese wonderland of winding passageways, magically sliding doors and private gardens, you enter another world, a world of classical Japan.

Nearly 300 years old, the Tawaraya makes few concessions to modernity. Guests still sleep on futon bedding spread on tatami (thick, springy floor mattings) and are served by smiling maid servants in neat kimonos.

As you check in, you are asked to leave your shoes at the entrance and are given soft slippers for the journey down the complex series of passageways to your room, which faces on a delicate private garden. You are asked if you will bathe before dinner, which you will, because that is the Japanese way.

In the bathroom, you soap your body, wash it off with water poured from large metal bowls and then step into the deep, deliciously hot wooden tub. You luxuriate for an hour, towel off, put on an under kimono, followed by a thick dining kimono, and prepare for the feast.

Your meal is personally served by a pair of smiling maids, who feed you like a child as you dine on kaiseki ryori, a dinner consisting of a mixture of fish -- raw, baked or steamed -- with vegetables and special soups. All accompanied by good, warm saki -- rice wine -- of course.

After dinner, as you sit and contemplate the garden, your maid servants will silently prepare your bed on the floor and you will re-enter to a changed room, with bedding magically sitting on top of the tatami. Soon your dreams are of ancient Japan, a land that, at times like these, seems changeless.

Certainly the Tawaraya ryokan, or Japanese-style inn, is changeless. And it shall remain that way, according to Mrs. Toshi Sato, whose family has owned the Tawaraya for 11 generations.

"We want you to feel that this is your own home, that you are completely secluded," says Mrs. Toshi. "You will rarely see other guests, and that is what we want you to feel -- total privacy."

To ensure that privacy, Mrs. Toshi refuses to expand her Japanese-style inn beyond the rooms it presently has.

"Some people have demolished their old inns and built huge ones," she said. "After momentary glory they have failed. Twenty rooms would be our extreme here. If we expanded over 20, we would probably lose the personal service that is so important to us."

Which is not to say that the Tawaraya has ignored the modern era. The rooms have been completely air conditioned, and central heating has been added within the past decade. Beside the delicately structured tokomoma, a sacred place in the room with beautifully arranged flowers and crafted dolls in a glass case, is that symbol of today, the television set. But the feeling is still of old Japan, even though a telephone is discreetly hidden under a cloth cover on the table by the bathroom.

This attention to the traditional in Japanese life has made the Tawaraya one of the most sought-after lodgings in the world. If you do happen to meet another guest in the corridors, it might well be Ali McGraw, or Candice Bergen, or Katharine Graham, or Marlon Brando or Robert Oppenheimer, all of whom have stayed here.

But more likely it will be your maid servant, who is at your elbow nearly constantly. And, as you pay your bill — it won't be cheap, probably about $100 for a night — you will leave amid a flurry of bowing, which seems to be a sincere gesture of regret. And you will sense the enduring foundation of a disciplined social behavior, of politeness between individuals and of the code of hospitality that prevades every aspect of Japanese life.

Peking okays Chinese Bible

PEKING (UPI) — The government has approved publication of the Christian Bible in the Chinese language for the first time since the 1949 communist revolution, according to the pastor of China's only Protestant church.

The Rev. Yin Ziehzeng said in an interview he hopes at least 100,000 copies will be printed by the government publishing house in charge of the work.

Yin also said a Christian Hymn book in the Chinese language may follow the Bible to the presses.

"The government already has sanctioned the Bible's translation and publication," Yin said. "We have Bibles, but not enough. Most Christians do not have Bibles in their homes."

Yin said when the 1966 Cultural Revolution set off 10 years of political turmoil in China, many Christian families destroyed their Bibles for fear of harassment by Mao Tse-Tung's Red Guards.

The new edition of the Bible will be printed in the simplified Chinese characters introduced by the government 20 years ago to make it easier for the people to learn to read.

Younger Chinese now find it difficult to read the complicated script used before the revolution, which still is in use in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Singapore.

Yin said the text of the new Bible will be decided on by a committee of former faculty members of Nanjing (Nanking) Seminary, now known as the Religion Department of Nanjing University.

They are working from Chinese-language Bibles printed before the 1949 revolution. They also are studying modern Bibles printed in foreign countries in recent years to learn what text changes have been made in the light of modern research.

"It will be a complete Bible with nothing left out," Yin said.

Yin said the Chinese government last April returned to a policy of religious toleration that had been in force until 1966 with the condition that China's churches be free of foreign direction and financing.

Yin said his church was closed from 1966 to 1971, and he and other Protestant pastors were exiled to the countryside. He said because of the government's new policy, other Protestant churches in major cities like Shanghai and Canton are expected to re-open soon.

Church organists seeking members

The Royal College of Church Organists, in search of new members, is beginning its season with a wine and cheese party tonight between 7 and 9 p.m. All those interested in church music of one sort or another would benefit from joining, says Vancouver Island chairman Mrs. Ann Osborne. All are welcome to attend the wine and cheese party. For further information, call Mrs. Osborne at 592-4357.

About 100 students register each term

Lay school offering night course option

Registrations are being taken now for Greater Victoria Lay School of Theology's fall program, which begins in two weeks.

Two courses are being offered, one Tuesdays at 8 p.m. from Sept. 25 through Nov. 27 at Metropolitan United, the other Wednesdays at 9:45 a.m. from Sept. 26 through Nov. 28 at Christ Church Cathedral hall.

The Tuesday course runs two hours nightly, the first hour being taken up with a basic course, the second hour one of two optional courses.

The basic course this session, Introducing the New Testament, will be conducted by Rev. John Lancaster, and covers the factors involved in the formation of this key religious text.

The optional courses are Studies in the Pentateuch, with Lancaster, or Athletes of God, featuring guest lecturers from several traditions who will introduce outstanding figures in the Judaic-Christian heritage.

Studies in the Pentateuch investigates the first five books in the Bible, dealing with selected texts in detail and going into the background and formation of the text.

The Wednesday course, The Book of Psalms, will be conducted by Rev. R.F. Palmer, SSJE, a member of the committee which produced the Canadian Anglican Book of Common Prayer, and author of the book The Psalms Then and Now.

Palmer will review the Book of Psalms to find their meaning to those who composed them, and to find the way in which Christians may use them in worship and prayer.

Registration is $10 per 10-week term for the evening course ($15 for two family members) and $5 for the morning course. Forms are available from the Greater Victoria Lay School of Theology, 912 Vancouver, Victoria V8V 3V7.

Founded in 1972, the school is a co-operative enterprise of lay men and women from Anglican, Presbyterian, Catholic, United and other churches, and is under the patronage of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

Its goal is to produce and support an informed and intellectually-alert laity, and it is open to all with a desire to learn more about theology and its place in the world today.

The courses are intended to be of particular help to lay leaders and teachers in local churches. About 100 students register each term.

Refugee expert on national tour

Dr. Geoffrey Atkinson, Canadian doctor and chief medical officer for World Vision in Thailand, is on a national speaking tour because of his concern for refugees.

He hopes to encourage more groups and churches to sponsor refugee families.

He will be speaking at Oaklands Gospel Chapel, 2736 Fernwood, Monday at 8 p.m. and will also appear with the local representative, Trudy Sweatman, on the Ida Clarkson Show Tuesday at noon.

He plans a tour up-Island with Sam Mattix, who was with Lloyd Oppel in concentration camp as a prisoner of war in Laos during the Vietnam war.

The public is invited to hear first-hand about conditions in Thailand and the true story of the refugees.

Church chronicles

MAX SOLBREKKEN, Canada's own evangelist, who has been around the world many times praying for and preaching to multitudes, has just returned from crusades in Norway, Britain, Sweden and Spain.

He found doors open to him all over Europe to preach the gospel and will be going there for three or four months in 1980.

Solbrekken will preach next Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Esquimalt United Church. All who wish to meet are welcome.

THE SECOND registration for Sunday school at St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra, begins at 9:30 a.m. Sunday in the lounge of the parish house behind the church.

The program of instruction in graded classes runs from preschool through Grade 6 and includes boy's and girl's bible study groups.

The children's choir which takes part in the 9:30 a.m. family service also has an instruction period during the Sunday worship and an adult bible study group meets at 9:30 a.m.

AN ENGLISH-language Eastern Orthodox church is being organized in Greater Victoria. The church, sponsored by the Antiochian, or Syrian, Orthodox Church of North America, is open to individuals of all ethnic backgrounds. As well, one of the chief goals of the new church will be to serve persons who are not Eastern Orthodox or do not have a current church affiliation.

There are several Eastern Orthodox congregations on Vancouver Island serving various ethnic groups, but the new group will be the first to use English as its primary language of worship.

Information is available by phoning 474-2462 evenings and weekends.

SHIOKARI PASS, a new film from the producers of The Hiding Place, will be shown at Esquimalt Church of the Nazarene, 886 Craigflower Road on Sunday at 7 p.m. Although the film has an English soundtrack, it was originally produced for showing to Japanese audiences.

FIRST UNITED's Hi-C Club will host young people from Grades 9 up at a corn roast at 5 p.m. Monday at Willows. The first meeting of the group for the season will follow Monday Sept. 24 at 7 p.m. in the Hi-C room. Information from Linda or Bob Restall at 478-8597 or Lawrence Moon at 388-5188.

THE UNIVERSITY WAY unit of United Church women will sponsor a donation dessert party and secret auction on Saturda Sept. 22 in First United Church's fellowship hall.

GUEST SPEAKER Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Victoria Truth Centre, 1201 Fort, will be Dr. Jack Holland, on the subject Your Freedom to Be.

Perspectives

By Rev. John A. Davidson

We are all, in varying degrees, victims of our own worrying. Some of it, of course, has valid causes, but much of it is needless, a waste of emotional energy. Many of our worries are about things we cannot appreciably change. Worry will not stop time passing for you at the rate of 24 hours a day.

Two plus two will continue to equal four, no matter how much you worry about it. Worry will not bring back yesterday so that you can do things differently—the way you now know you should have done them. Worry will not keep today's vital and vibrant young person from becoming in 20 or so years a not-so-vital and not-so-vibrant middle-aged person.

Jesus' disciples, like you and me, were worriers. They fretted and fussed over many things, and their worrying led them to quarrelling and dissension. One day Jesus tackled them on this: you can read what he said to them in the 12th chapter of Luke's Gospel, verses 22 to 31. "You are not worry", he admonished them: that is the way it is given in the New English Bible.

The Greek word rendered there as "worry" originally meant "in suspense" or "in midair", and it is not misleading to put Jesus' admonition in this way: "You mustn't become hung-up."

A clear distinction cannot be drawn between "worry" and "anxiety", but it seems convenient to use "worry" for something less intense and more tentative than anxiety. This seems to be what Jesus had in mind, not neurotic anxiety, when he said, "You are not to worry."

We often fool ourselves with our worries. Even worry about other persons—such as the worry husbands and wives have for one another and which parents have for their children—is not always an indication of love for others: sometimes it is simply possessive self-love which seems threatened. Some of our worrying is mere self-deception.

Worry cannot change the hard facts of life for us. And it is doubly dangerous, for it can keep us from changing our perspectives on the hard facts. Often the only difference between contentment and satisfaction in life and despair and depression is the perspective one has on oneself and on one's circumstances and on one's relations with others. Worry tends to fix one's perspectives at the wrong angles.

How, then, can we manage our worries: I offer you a simple prescription—even though I do not take the medicine myself as often as I should. If you must worry, try to shift your perspectives on those things you worry about and try to switch your worry from morbid concern about your own little problems to concern for the well-being of others.

Many of your worries will evaporate when you show active concern, compassionate concern, for others. It is clear from the teaching of Jesus that worrying about the welfare of others is a dimension of love—providing it is not a mere wallowing in pity as a substitute for compassionate action. And love, as love is understood in the Bible as the active willing of the good of others, is necessary to fulfilment in life.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

Long-range blueprint by caucus — Bennett

DELTA (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Friday the five-day Social Credit caucus which wound up here Friday produced a blueprint for British Columbia that will guide the province into the 21st century.

"We can't think in terms of one or two years," he said. "Because whatever decisions we make now, we'll have to live with for the next 20 to 30 years."

Bennett said energy development will be the cornerstone of B.C.'s economic future to guarantee jobs for young people.

"We won't be weak and leave our province unprepared for the future," said Bennett. "Some aspects of our plan may be controversial but we're prepared to go ahead with them."

Bennett would not specify what aspects would be controversial, saying only that B.C. will make its energy plans clear at the next first ministers' conference. However, he said nuclear energy was not discussed during the caucus meeting.

The premier said he will announce a cabinet shuffle in the first or second week of November, after the Social Credit Party's annual convention.

Bennett reaffirmed his support for a Vancouver-area sports stadium but said more positive public statements are needed from the federal government and the Greater Vancouver Regional District before the province can endorse any stadium project.

Somewhat cooler but no rain sighted

Traditional fall weather will arrive in Victoria tonight with mainly sunny skies and comfortably-warm temperatures for at least five days.

The outlook for Sunday is for a high in the range of 22 to 24 with only a few cloudy periods, and virtually no chance of rain.

The new weather pattern replaces the prickly heat of Friday, when temperatures shot up to 29 degrees, just under the all-time record for Sept. 14 of 29.4 degrees back in 1951.

The unusually-high temperature was due to a powerful high pressure ridge sitting over the province, preventing cool ocean breezes from reaching the city.

A new weather system from the north, however, is breaking up the old system and the new weather pattern will restore Victoria's natural air conditioning system of afternoon sea breezes.

"It will be a return to the normal September weather pattern," says forecaster Ian Higgs.

"Temperatures should be comfortable and no rain is expected this weekend. This weather pattern should continue at least until Wednesday."

Emergency room fees up Oct. 1

Fees for non-emergency treatment at emergency rooms in Victoria's two major hospitals will shoot up as much as 500 per cent on Oct. 1, the medical director of Victoria General Hospital announced on Friday.

Dr. Don Carlow said the fees will rise to $10 for B.C. residents, $15 for other Canadians and $25 for non-Canadian residents.

The fees at present are $2 for B.C. residents and $5 for anyone else.

Carlow said, however, the $2 fee for admission of a genuine emergency case will remain, but only for B.C. residents.

An emergency is defined as an accidental injury to any part of the body or development of a sudden acute illness which in either case requires immediate attention.

He said the new fee schedule was worked out in joint meetings between the two hospitals.

Drab stucco hides 'jewel'; synagogue face-lift eyed

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria's Jewish community hopes to raise $250,000 to uncover what they describe as a "jewel" of a building lurking beneath the drab stucco exterior of their synagogue at Blanshard and Pandora.

The fundraising campaign started Friday with a press conference in the 116-year-old Temple Emanuel at Blanshard and Pandora with Mayor Mike Young, Victoria NDP MLAs Charles Barber and Gordon Hanson and other representatives of Jewish and gentile organizations pledging their support.

The provincial heritage trust has already pledged $50,000 towards restoring the outside of the building and Young said the city may also help with some financial aid.

The mayor said plans for the synagogue have come a long way in the last five years, when it was proposed to demolish it, sell the property and use the money to build a modern temple.

Historical and architectural research proved the building was worth saving.

"It was a hard jewel to discover," said Young.

Rabbi Harvey Markowitz, who came to Victoria only 10 months ago, said the restoration will symbolize the present rapid growth in the Jewish community. The congregation numbers about 250 people.

"This is the greatest example of the statement that young and old must live together. It will be a jewel to share with all of B.C."

Temple Emanuel is the oldest standing synagogue in Canada and the west coast of North America and the oldest house of worship in B.C. in continuous use.

School trustee Martin Levin, who is chairman of the restoration committee, noted that some city aldermen and Christchurch Cathedral have already made donations to the fund.

He said the congregation is appealing to Victorians in the same ecumenical spirit in which the synagogue was built.

In 1863 there were only 35 Jews in the Victoria congegation and many non-Jews contributed to the building fund. These Scottish and English and American pioneers are still remembered — the original pages from the building fund ledger have been framed and hung in the foyer.

Architect Nick Bawlf has drawn up restoration plans which will radically alter the present appearance of the building which he said was similar to old synagogues in New York city and Poland and other parts of Europe.

"Stylistically, it is an important building."

Before the stucco was applied in the 1950s, the synagogue was quite different from the unobtrusive pale green building it is today. Originally, it was built of brick with a triple-arched entrance on Blanshard, numerous arched windows all around and a rose window of stained glass.

The interior was also remodelled sometime in this century. The builders put in a false ceiling and blocked off the balcony overlooking the main floor. Bawlf wants to restore the gallery and other interior details.

Donations can be sent to Congegation Emanuel, 1461 Blanshard Street, Victoria, V8W 2J3 or call 656-4242 for information.

Trucks pose CRD dilemma

The Capital Regional Board is being asked to resolve a classic dilemma — industrial development versus residential tranquility — in a rezoning application from Dale Arden Log Hauling Ltd.

Arden owns land near Muir Creek where he hauls logs but at present he keeps his trucks in Sooke. He wants permission to operate from his Muir Creek site, which is zoned residential.

But his neighbors are opposed to having the trucks park and operate in their area.

On his side are those who would be pleased to see him get his trucks out of town since he must drive 20 trucks twice a day through Sooke village, including two school zones, to get to and from the logging site.

The CRD board is looking for a recommendation from director Charles Perkins, who represents the area concerned.

And, while the issue comes to a vote on Sept. 26, Perkins says he hasn't yet decided whether the land should be rezoned for industrial use.

Ferry talk breather

Negotiations between the B.C. Ferry Corp. and the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union were adjourned Friday for the weekend, the industrial inquiry commissioner into the dispute said.

Clive McKee said the break, which comes after eight days of intensive negotiations, will give both sides time to consider their respective positions.

The 2,600-member union has served strike notice on the corporation.

Cheques decline

Value of cheques and other payments processed through Victoria area banks in July was $4,302.9 million, down from $4,335.7 million in the same month last year.

It was also down from $5,841.6 million in June.

The figures, provided by the Canadian Bankers Association, include all cheques cashed except those drawn on the Bank of Canada, the federal government or by the banks themselves.

Willems—Maycock

St. Luke's Church was the setting for a lovely candlelight ceremony on August 25, 1979, when Kelly Lyn, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Len Maycock and Gerry Willems, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Willems were united in marriage. Rev. Moulden officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride had chosen a lovely gown of fine silk jersey fashioned on classic lines. Beautiful Swiss Guipure lace bordered the split neckline and close collar of the fitted bodice and edged the cuffs of the long, slim sleeves. The floor-length skirt draped softly to a chapel train. Her new style head-set of Swiss lace cap and fingertip length veil of silk illusion tulle adorned with lace completed the picture of a radiant and happy bride. She carried a cascade bouquet of orange Baccara roses and baby's breath.

Maid of honour, Margaret Hogg and bridesmaids, Jacky Willems, sister of the groom, and Lori and Lianne Maycock, sisters of the bride, all wore identical formal gowns in alternating colours of yellow or peach. They carried colonial bouquets of white daisies with peach or yellow carnations.

The groom was handsomely attired in his cream tuxedo complimented by a Baccara rose and baby's breath boutonniere.

The groom's cousin, Peter Schmid was best man and Frank VandenBiggelaar, the groom's uncle, Dave Bennett and Ed Willems, the groom's brother, were ushers with Shawn Rhode being the ring bearer.

The bride's uncle and godfather, Mr. Brian Taylor travelled from Boston, Mass., to propose the toast to the bride. Loree Green accompanied by Kathy Patterson sang "Evergreen" to the newlyweds. A Maycock family heirloom sword was used to cut the 3-tier wedding cake, which had been made by Mrs. Lillian Taylor, the bride's grandmother.

The bride presented a rose from her bouquet to her great-grandmother, Mrs. Lily Kelly who had been married the same day 70 years before.

For her going away outfit, the bride chose an ivory linen skirt with silk blouse topped by a camel jacket and hat and accented with a Gardenia corsage.

Gerry and Kelly would like to thank their relatives from Alberta and Mass. who travelled so far to be with them and all their friends and loved ones who shared in their special celebration of love.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

SEAFRONT OFFERING

If you have not yet discovered "PIERS", Western Canada's most unique planned summer cottage community and want complete details about this fascinating "Island in the Sun", almost on the doorstep of the Saanich Peninsula — Call without obligation.

ARTIST OR WRITER

Will appreciate this Eagle's Eyrie — a 400 sq. ft. cottage perched on the most commanding view site on Piers Island. Yes! It has a western exposure and you can see the sun set behind Mt. Tuam on Salt Spring, breathtaking seaviews up Satellite Channel of Cherry Point and Cowichan Bay. The combined living room-kitchen area features a natural field-stone fireplace and stainless steel sink. Electric heating. Separate bedroom and three-piece bathroom. A wrap-around patio to appreciate the 180 deg. view. On one of the island's largest lots a winding path approaches the cottage through cool glades lush with fern and shaded by tall timber. The agile will use the existing rugged path to the good beach below while the more sedate will use nearby accesses or improve the path down to a more acceptable standard. All-in-all, a unique retreat — at only $48,500.

For appointment to view call R. Fraser Biscoe, F.R.I., R.I.(B.C.), Seafront Specialist Realtor, 383-9413 anytime. FRASER BISCOE, Penthouse Office, Executive House, 777 Douglas St., Victoria.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

4 bird-smugglers nabbed

SYDNEY (UPI) — A multi-million dollar bird smuggling ring said to be linked to a former U.S. Mafia boss was smashed today with the arrest of four men, police said.

Detective Inspector Vic Anderson, in charge of the investigation, said the four were linked to Vincent (Big Vinnie) Teresa, a top U.S. Mafia figure who owns a bird shop in Seattle.

The four men arrested in Sydney suburbs included a senior Australian customs department officer, two Germans and a Lebanese.

The arrests followed the seizing by police of more than $2.2 million worth of rare birds — many of them drugged — in covered crates in Kurandan, Queensland, Aug. 14.

Anderson said Teresa, while under FBI protection after informing on his former Mafia allies, had set up an organization to market the birds. He said Teresa visited Australia in 1977 to help set up the smuggling ring.

"We believe this particular operation has been underway since October 1978, and millions of dollars worth of birds could have been smuggled out in that period," Anderson said. "The whole bird smuggling racket is much larger than anyone suspects."

Anderson said two detectives from Sydney flew to the United States and met FBI officers and U.S. customs officials. The detectives also interviewed Teresa and returned to Australia this week.

"The talks with Teresa led to the arrest of the four men," Anderson said.

Anderson said exotic Australian birds fetched up to $4,000 each in the United States. "A total of 816 galahs and 37 cockatoos were seized at Kurandan" he said.

Inspector Don Thomas said between 20 and 30 of the birds seized were drugged with Valium, a tranquilizer, and placed in wood and wire mesh cages.

He said it was believed the birds were to be smuggled out of Australia by aircraft and flown to the United States.

Religious riots in India leave dozens injured

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Armed patrols enforced a curfew today in Delhi's old walled city following rioting between Hindus and Moslems that left dozens injured.

There was no official casualty figure but the riots, the worst in the capital for years, were bound to highlight the touchy communal issue in campaigning for the November-December national election.

City police said the trouble started when Moslems were attacked on their way to say Friday prayers. Police were stoned when they tried to break up the fighting.

They fired in the air and used tear gas to disperse the crowd, which set fire to a number of shops.

A 36-hour curfew was imposed and police with nightsticks were backed up by armed patrols around the huge domed Jama Masjid Mosque.

Hundreds of policemen patrolled the predominantly Moslem area, which was littered with broken glass and stones.

A mosque official said stones and bottles were thrown at the building during the two hours of riots.

Recurring Moslem-Hindu riots in the northern cities of Aligarh and Jamshedpur took scores of lives in recent months. Communal violence has become a major election issue with each political party saying it can best protect minorities and ensure law and order.

Fund finds Fick fouls Franks

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — A state agency has awarded $650,000 to a lawyer who said his ability to earn a living was damaged by open heart surgery that left his voice reduced to a whisper.

The state Patient's Compensation Fund issued the award Friday, finding that Dr. Kenneth Fick, a Milwaukee anesthesiologist, was negligent in the care and treatment of attorney Barnett Franks.

Franks, 55, claimed that for 10 years before his vocal cords were injured his annual income had increased from about $12,000 to more than $100,000. He said for the two years after the surgery, his annual professional income was $36,000.

The operation took place in August 1976.

Heavy casualties

DAMASCUS (Reuter) — Eritrean forces inflicted heavy casualties on Ethiopian troops in a battle about 60 kilometres south of Asmara. The battle began when Ethiopian forces tried to break the siege around them but failed.

Carter doesn't last course

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — President Carter dropped out of a 10-kilometre running race Saturday and immediately returned to Camp David. There was no word on whether he was injured.

Rosalynn Carter, awaiting her husband at the finish line, immediately entered her limousine and returned to the presidential retreat.

Carter, an avid jogger, dropped out after running about six kilometres. Though few spectators were nearby, one reported that he sat on the seat of a golf cart then moved to a car to be driven back to Camp David.

Dr. William Lukash, Carter's personal physician, was running in the race and was believed to be have been running alongside the president.

Carter, who is spending the weekend at the presidential retreat, entered the race with about 900 others.

Frederic dies amid floods but gulf's spawning Henri

Times News Services

The remnants of hurricane Frederic, reduced to a soggy windstorm, passed through the Maritimes Friday night, leaving a trail of wreckage through the United States.

And while areas along the hurricane alley still reeled, forecasters said a new weather disturbance in the gulf probably would become a tropical storm by the end of the day.

This morning, the disturbance, which will be named Henri if it becomes a tropical storm, was located just north of the Yucatan Peninsula, about 400 miles southwest of Key West, Fla. It was moving slightly west of north at less than 10 miles an hour and was expected to maintain that course and speed for the next 24 hours. Highest winds were 35 miles an hour.

"Conditions appear favorable for further strengthening of this system and it will likely be upgraded to a tropical storm later today," Paul Hebert, forecaster at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said.

Two overnight fires claimed five lives in Prichard, Ala., where electricity was still out because of hurricane Frederic. One of the fires, started by a candle, claimed the lives of a mother and her three children.

The five new deaths raised to 16 the number storm-related deaths from Frederic. Two other men at Bayou La Batre, south of Mobile, were killed late Friday when a kersone stove exploded.

Farther north, monsoon-like rains turned creeks to rivers and rivers to raging torrents as the storm cut a deadly 120-kilometre swath through the Ohio Valley and parts of New England.

Nashville, Tenn., authorities reported the heaviest rainfall in 79 years — 17 centimetres — and $1.8 million in agricultural damage. Three persons were killed in weather-related traffic accidents.

In Southwestern Ohio, the Greater Miami and Little Miami rivers overflowed, stranding motorists, blocking many roads and underpasses. Officials in the Coshocton area said residents were being evacuated from low areas.

In Albion, about 65 kms northeast of Buffalo, a harried police spokesman said: "The village is closed." Deputy Sheriff John Miles added: "The water is going into homes as fast as they can pump it out."

President Carter visited the hurricane ravaged Gulf coast Friday and pledged to residents that "the country will not forget you." Hardly had he departed, however, when a trailer truck from Georgia pulled up in a shopping center parking lot and began peddling 10-pound bags of ice for $5 each.

But Carter's tour of the hurricane-ravaged coast Friday appeared to buoy the spirits of residents trying to clean up the mess and rebuild, and officials who had already curbed looting with a curfew and shoot-to-kill orders took steps to end the price-gouging.

Prichard Police Chief A.G. Hildreth said a store that normally sold a file for sharpening chain saws for $1.50 was asking $7.50 for it Thursday. He said one man was selling beer at $5 the six-pack, and another peddling four pounds of dry ice for $20.

In the Maritimes, brisk winds were reported throughout the region, but the only reports of direct storm damage were a few hydro poles and trees down in western New Brunswick.

(a) He could have tried here: 6 . . . P-K4; 7. PxP, NxKP; 8. BxN, PxB; 9. QxQch, KxQ. From now on, you will see the Black Knights being chased from pillar to post . . .

(b) From bad to worse. If 16 . . . PxP; 17. PxP, P-K4; 18. N-B3, R-K1; 19. N-QN5, etc.

(c) If 24 . . . Q-Q1; 25. N-B7, R-N1; 26. B-R7. Now he loses a piece.

TO ERR . . . IS HUMAN

In even a major chess tournament, not all the games played are well-played. Many are decided by pure blunders. Sometimes both sides make mistakes but the one who makes the last one loses. Most of these blunders occur in the final hour of play. Time trouble is the main cause of this deciding factor. No matter how painful it is for the player who commits such a blunder, the observer feels a sort of inner satisfaction.

Let us consider a classic example played in Oslo two years ago. WHITE (A. Moen of Norway) had his King on KB7, Rooks on QB1 and KR4, pawns on QR4 and QR3 (5 pieces). BLACK (Dr. H. Lehmann of Germany) had his King on Q4, Rooks on KN5 and KN3 and a pawn on QB5 (4 pieces).

The time control was passed, but White still continued fast and played 1. RxP??.

Berlin International Chessmaster Lehmann lost himself in deep thought. The unbelieving spectators stood by with their mouths agape. Lehmann saw only 1 . . . RxRB5; 2. RxR, KxR; 3. KxR, and after 10 minutes offered his opponent a draw, which was quickly accepted with both hands!

All it would have taken would be . . . KxR and White would have resigned. Strange but true!

* * *

The solution to the problem above is: 1. N-B4, BxNB5; 2. Q-B5 mate; or 1. N-B4, BxNB2; 2. R-Q6 d.ch. and mate; or 1. N-B4, BxQ; 2. R-B5 mate, etc.

12 die in crash?

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (AP) — A DC-7 plane used to fight forest fires crashed on a southern Oregon mountain, apparently killing all 12 persons aboard, U.S. Forest Service officials said today.

Officials said no survivors had been sighted following the crash late Friday.

The plane had been used to drop fire-retardant chemicals on a small forest fire near Roseburg, northwest of Klamath Falls. It then stopped to pick up employees of the plane's owner, Butler Aircraft Co. of Redmond.

Sue Hughes of the Forest Service said loggers saw the plane go down on the 1,900-metre Surveyor Peak about 32 kilometres west of Klamath Falls.

She said all 12 persons aboard were employees of Butler Aircraft. Their names were not released.

The company also has planes helping to fight a 900-acre forest fire north of Klamath Falls.

Spy post Time lapse admitted

NEW YORK (AP) — A purported Soviet-built intelligence station in Cuba pictured in the Sept. 17 issue of Time magazine apparently is an installation built by International Telephone and Telegraph to relay telephone calls between Cuba and the United States, Time said Friday.

Richard Duncan, Time's chief of correspondents, said the magazine was given wrong information.

The color photo, appearing on page 13, illustrates the magazine's cover story Storm Over Cuba, which deals with the controversy over a Soviet army unit in Cuba. The picture is of two large, dish-like structures, perpendicular to the ground, and a tower with a silvery disc on top.

The caption of the copyright photo said the picture showed a Soviet-built intelligence station, "a section of an advanced electronics monitoring complex atop a limestone hill east of Havana."

Hopes rise in Cuba crisis talks

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The first shadowy outlines of the secret diplomatic negotiations on Soviet troops in Cuba emerged Friday in guarded comments of informed congressional and administration officials, who expressed optimism about a mutually acceptable settlement.

Following a third round of talks between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Ambassador Anatoliy F. Dobrynin at the State Department, officials still refused to set a target date for a conclusion. Vance said another meeting with Dobrynin is likely Sunday or Monday, and diplomatic sources reported that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is expected to arrive early next week in New York. This could bring a change in the tempo and perhaps the level of the negotiations.

"The Vance-Dobrynin meetings are progressing well," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, W-Va., one of the handful of congressional leaders who has been briefed by the tight-lipped secretary of state about the sensitive negotiations.

"We are getting a quick turnaround (from Moscow) on the information we are seeking. The Soviets are being responsive," he said.

With the future of the strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II) in the balance, Byrd said he has been cautioning undecided senators against taking positions based on the Soviet troops issue until the current negotiations are completed.

An administration official who is familiar with the details of the negotiations said the United States has not presented a formal proposal to the Soviets at this stage about the presence in Cuba of what the United States describes as a Soviet combat brigade.

The official, who asked not to be quoted by name, said President Carter and his administration have agreed on "some general notions about what would be a mutually satisfactory outcome."

Meanwhile, in a bizarre bit of gunboat diplomacy, or perhaps because of a foul-up, the Soviet Union is sending a seventh guided missile patrol boat to Cuba, Washington sources said Friday.

A Soviet freighter, sources said, was towing the 205-ton gunboat of the Osa II class toward Cuba Friday.

This latest example of Soviet military aid to Fidel Castro is expected to further complicate the talks.

Talks on weekend hold

LONDON (AP) — The British-sponsored Zimbabwe Rhodesia peace talks have recessed for the weekend after Patriotic Front guerrillas proposed a new constitution that would put all power in the hands of blacks and leave leaders of the current bi-racial regime open to possible trial.

Both the guerrilla and government delegations indicated Friday they will resume serious bargaining on Monday. The first five days of talks included only seven hours at the bargaining table and frequent bursts of name-calling and manoeuvring.

Behind the posturing, guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe are pushing to discuss "a real transfer of power," that would put them in control of the government. Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa hopes for formal British recognition and an end to trade sanctions in return for acceptance of a new constitution that would decrease the disproportionate authority held by 230,000 whites over the country's seven million blacks.

Nkomo and Mugabe offered their own draft constitution on Friday, countering a proposal already raised by Britain. The guerrillas draft would strip whites of parliamentary representation and demand the resignation of top government officials before its implementation.

Their draft would grant supreme power to a president, who would appoint replacements to current top officials, including many white judges and generals.

The proposal was clearly aimed at the transfer of power to the forces of Nkomo, operating out of Zambia, and Mugabe's guerrillas based in Mozambique.

The British draft constitution would end whites' control of the security forces, the judiciary and civil service, but guarantee them an unspecified number of seats in parliament for five to 10 years.

So far, the delegates have not reached the issue that has stymied previous parleys, control of the military during possible elections or a transfer of power.

The guerrillas warned that "criminals" from the current regime would face trial. Mugabe's spokesman Eddison Zvobgo refused to specify who might be charged. "But anybody who has committed a crime clearly will have to have his day in court," he told reporters.

Grandpa conquers channel

DOVER, England (AP) — James "Doc" Counsilman, a 58-year-old swimming coach from Indiana University, became the oldest person to swim the English Channel when he reached shore in France after a grueling 13½-hour swim from England Friday.

Counsilman, a grandfather, landed near Cap Gris Nez, France at 7:30 p.m. local time. He set out from Shakespeare Beach, Dover, 35 kilometres away.

The Bloomington, Ind., resident, who has trained such American Olympic swimmers as Mark Spitz, beat a record held by Ned Barnie, a Scot, who made the crossing in 1951 at 55.

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board on Friday gave the go ahead for the first non-stop passenger flights between the United States and China in 30 years.

A spokesman said the CAB has approved six round-trip charter flights beginning Dec. 3. The two-week charter flights will go from San Francisco to Shanghai.

PERSIAN RUG SALE

WHY BUY PERSIAN RUGS?

BECAUSE IF: There is a Persian rug on the floor. What does that tell you about its owner? Probably that he is well off. Also, he'll be a secure person because a Persian rug is a good saleable item in these inflation-ridden times. It is easier to sell expensive Oriental carpets today in a sluggish economy than it was in the 1950's and 60's although the average price of an authentic Oriental carpet has greatly increased in recent years. An Oriental rug is an excellent hedge against inflation because its value increases constantly. The reason for this is the increased wealth and industrialization of Mid-East countries. Weavers and master artists are leaving their traditional work and are entering industrial employment. In Addition the Shah of Iran had introduced compulsory education thereby effectively eliminating the employment of children in rug weaving, says Ejaz Khan of B.C. Palace Ltd. Mr. Khan will be displaying an excellent selection of Persian carpets and rugs that will appeal to the discriminating and budget conscious home decorator and art lovers offered to you at Bargain Prices. Mr. Khan invites you to come and investigate the opportunities provided by Oriental carpets, to make an investment that safeguards your money and provides you with luxury as it appreciates.

U.S. okays weapons bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. House of Representatives approved a $42.2 billion weapons bill Friday that includes $990 million to be spent on development of nuclear shelters and evacuation plans for major cities.

The authorization bill for weapons development and purchases was approved 282 to 46. The Senate has passed a $40.1 billion version of the bill, so Senate-House conferees will have to work out a compromise between the two measures.

Before approving the bill, the House voted to include funds for construction of a nuclear aircraft carrier that President Carter has said he does not want built. Carter has threatened to veto the bill if the $2.1 billion for the carrier is not deleted.

In addition, the House deleted a provision that would have renewed draft registration for 18-year-olds.

The House gave formal approval of the $990 million new five-year civil defence shelter and evacuation program on a vote of 189 to 149.

The provision would require President Carter to have evacuation plans developed for major cities in case of nuclear war, nuclear accidents or similar disasters.

The president also would be required to order a survey of existing shelters and develop plans to build and stock new shelters in cities.

The program was proposed by Ike Skelton (Dem.-Mo.), who said it would establish definite goals for the first time since the civil defence system was established in the 1950s.

"By our country maintaining attack preparedness, there will be a war-preventing value in our civil defence," Skelton said.

Denouncement of U.S. senator recommended

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recommendation by the U.S. Senate ethics committee that Senator Herman Talmadge be denounced for "reprehensible" financial misconduct completes only one step in the lengthy investigation of the Georgia Democrat's affairs.

Talmadge now must face action by the full Senate — an occurrence that probably is at least several weeks away.

And in announcing its recommendation Friday, the committee said it will make its files on Talmadge available to the justice department "to determine if violations of law have occurred."

The punishment recommended by the committee contains no penalty other than public humiliation. The committee made no recommendation on whether Talmadge should be stripped of his seniority.

The committee ruled unanimously Friday that Talmadge violated Senate rules by:

— Failing to report more than $10,000 in campaign contributions that were deposited in a secret bank account by his former administrative assistant, Daniel Minchew, in 1973 and 1974.

— Claiming $43,435.83 from the Senate from 1973 through June 30, 1978 for official expenses that were not incurred. Talmadge already has repaid about $37,000 to the Senate but refused to pay any expense money that Minchew put into the secret account.

— Failing to file correct financial-disclosure statements from 1972 through 1977; failing to file his candidate receipts and expenditures report in a timely fashion for the year 1973; and filing inaccurate reports of candidate receipts and expenditures for the year 1974.

Inquiry ordered for Elvis' doctor

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A criminal investigation of Elvis Presley's doctor was ordered Friday amid reports the rock 'n' roll star died a drug-induced death.

District Attorney Hugh Stanton said the investigation was prompted by a complaint brought against Dr. George Nichopoulos by state health officials, who claim the doctor prescribed more than 5,000 uppers, downers and painkillers for Presley during the seven months immediately preceding his death two years ago.

Stanton's announcement followed a report on the ABC-TV news magazine 20-20 that Presley was a "medical drug addict" who died as a result of a persistent abuse of drugs prescribed to him by doctors and dentists.

Nichopoulos could face a jail term of two to 10 years and a fine up to $20,000 if convicted on criminal charges.

GM strike averted by tentative pact

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. says it tried to give the United States a small "shot of confidence" by agreeing to a new contract with the United Auto Workers union without a strike.

The two sides, meeting in a marathon bargaining session that began at 6 p.m. Thursday, announced tentative agreement on a new pact less than three hours before strike deadline of midnight Friday night.

If ratified, it would be the first time in 15 years there has been no strike against the union's target company in national negotiations.

The agreement provides large pension increases, the make-or-break issue since talks began July 16. Auto worker pensions have been fixed by contract. The new agreement is the first to provide increases in the life of a contract.

No immediate average increase was available, but two examples worked out to annual increases of 8.5 per cent and 9.3 per cent.

Other details were withheld but it appeared that the union had to accept the traditional wage formula — three-per-cent annual increases plus a cost-of-living formula — that it wanted to improve.

The UAW won more paid time off and, said one report, automatic recognition in new plants.

Noting a "general malaise and tremendous consciousness of inflation," GM Vice-President George Morris, the company's chief negotiator, said: "The country needed a shot of confidence."

"I don't know if this is of that magnitude," he said, "but in our own little way it should serve to encourage people, despite all the predictions by people who didn't know anything about the situation, that there would be a strike and it would be of predictable duration."

The Big Three companies employ 780,000 UAW members, 460,000 at GM.

Inflation hammers Israelis

TEL AVIV (AP) - Touched off by an 17 per cent jump in food prices, Israel's consumer price index rose 8.4 per cent in August, one of the highest increases in the country's history, the government said Friday.

The increase brought the rise in the index for the first eight months of the year to 53 per cent. At the current rate, inflation is expected to reach 100 per cent by December.

Most of the increase in the cost of food was attributed to a cut in government subsidies.

The cabinet is due Sunday to discuss Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich's proposal to lop about $350 million from the development budget in an attempt to halt inflation. If accepted, the cuts might mean layoffs for tens of thousands of workers and building freezes.

Drug firms swallow $111M pill

TOKYO (AP) — The government and three Japanese drug firms agreed today to pay compensation that could total $111 million to an estimated 10,000 persons in Japan suffering from the nerve paralyzing disease known as SMON.

Japanese courts have ruled the disease is caused by Quinoform, a drug manufactured by three pharmaceutical firms — Tanabe Seiyaku Co., Takeda Chemical Industries Ltd., and Chiba-Geigy (Japan) Ltd.

The agreement could close the book on a decade-old dispute over what is actually responsible for the disease.

SMON is an acronym for Subacute Opticao Neuropathy, an illness whose symptoms include stomach pains, diarrhea and numbness of the limbs. The disease affects the nervous system and at its worst can cause blindness and paralysis of the arms and legs.

Under the agreement, SMON victims are entitled to receive up to $111,000 each in a lump sum to be paid jointly by the government and the drug makers.

Officials of the three firms could not be reached for comment today, which is Care for the Aged Day, a national holiday in Japan.

The SMON dispute has attracted wide attention because of conflicting claims concerning the origin of the ailment and because of frequent demonstrations.

Now, I realize I'd better be careful how I handle this or they can have a thousand women here in half an hour, all marching, carrying signs . . .

The subject is the building of the body beautiful — both male and female — and I can tell you, you've come a long way, babies, since the days of stays and corsets to the era of heaving weights.

And very soon, right here in Victoria, you will have come even further than any of the women elsewhere in western North America.

Body building, or pumping iron as they say, has been around a long time for men. Though a few women have dabbled with weights, most have stayed clear of them lest they end up like Russian shot-putters.

Now, it seems, more and more women are getting involved in what they call progressive resistance training.

The reference to weights puts them off, it appears, but what the fairer sex is doing in increasing numbers is still good old weight lifting and the use of other body building equipment.

Trouble is though there just aren't enough co-ed facilities around in the gyms that specialize in body building.

When South African-born Warren Langman brought the legendary Bill Pearl here two years ago to open his Victoria Health Club on Johnson Street, three or four women showed interest in joining — along with a host of men.

There was nowhere for them to change or shower, however, and while the male membership has shot up over the 200 mark, there are still only three or four women working out.

Present owners Peter Mueller and partner Gary Blonden realized the need to branch out.

"Every second phone call we get is an inquiry from a woman," says Mueller.

"Body building is really taking off like mad in B.C."

And so Mueller, a former car repairman whose lifetime hobby has been body building, and Blonden, owner of the Fitness Centre in Nanaimo, will in a week or so move their Victoria Health Club operation downstairs to impressive new quarters.

Male club members will be well catered for with a larger workout room, a power lifting gym at the back and complete shower and sauna facilities.

But it's the women's gym — first of its kind on this side of the continent — that makes the whole thing unique.

As well as their changing rooms with showers and saunas, the ladies will have their own workout rooms of equal size to the gents.

The latest in body building machines — a leg press, a leg-extension table, an inner-outer thigh machine, a bench press (which I'm told is for the development of the bust) and a torso machine — are being brought in from the U.S. and will be set out in almost 3,000 square feet of space, where walls lined with mirrors let them know how they're getting on, or getting the inches off as the case may be.

Gary's wife Sharon and Peter's wife Rini, who have both been into body building for several years, will be the women's gym instructors.

And they will be helped out by Gary, once a phys ed instructor with the Canadian Armed Forces and a teacher of the art of exercise for 18 years.

Women body builders do exactly the same as the guys only with a little lighter equipment, Gary explained.

"At the beginning, they do more floor exercises than the men but once their bodies get used to exercise, they do all the same things we do," he said.

The new trend has come because women are no longer afraid of becoming muscle-bound.

"For one thing, they can't," Gary said. "They are not able to put on huge muscles because of the androgenic hormone level. The more they exercise, the more feminine they become. The more a woman exercises, the more her figure takes on a svelte and natural shape.

"Because of the increased interest among women in really taking care of their figure — and I don't just mean dieting — there is a lot more research being done and many of the old wives tales about over-exercising are being refuted."

Gary said his wife is a perfect example.

"She's 35 and has two kids and her figure is literally the envy of all the teenagers and young women she knows," he said.

In an era when there is still controversy over the value of jogging and many try desperately to justify their obesity or inactivity or both, Gary Blonden is adament.

"Good strenuous exercise is a cure all. I really believe that. The human body is the only machine in the world that breaks down when it is not used. Exercise doesn't sap the body of energy, it rejuvenates it."

Okay Gary, you sold me . . . I'm off to get rejuvenated.

Free firewood hard to find

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Winter's coming on, the price of heating oil is inevitably on the rise and everywhere you look there's a plentiful supply of the stuff our forefathers used to solve their own energy crisis — trees.

You think it might be a good idea to beat the high cost of commercial firewood — up to $65-$70 a cord this year — and also get a little exercise and fresh air at the same time by cutting your own.

The catch is finding some to cut.

Although near Victoria there are stands of desirable firewood like red alder there's none close in you can cut for nothing. The closest free firewood means at least a 100-kilometre round trip.

Even the derelict logs which have escaped some tugboat's boom and clutter up the beaches around Victoria are legally off limits.

The last two years Langford forest ranger Bruce Holloway has issued permits to cut firewood but this year with more than a dozen inquiries a day coming in, he is unable to oblige.

It looks like an endless supply of trees out there, but around Victoria only about five to eight per cent of the land is Crown-owned.

"Crown land is hard to get hold of these days," said Holloway.

There's really very little alder available between here and Otter Point, 40 kilometres west of Victoria.

"You see a lot on the Sooke Road but it's all privately-owned."

He said it's a faint possibility the forest service may open up an area for firewood next year, however.

Farther out of town the pickings are better. In fact, 200 kilometres away there's four or five cutting sites between Parksville and Campbell River, according to forest service spokesman Betty Amos.

Lake Cowichan also has some available firewood. Check with the ranger there.

But that's all for Crown land.

Some private logging companies allow cutting on their property. Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber Co. at Jordan River offers free permits — available weekdays only at their office there — to cut in the area and many Sooke and Victoria residents make the long drive for wood.

Pacific Logging Co., the CPR subsidiary with extensive holdings near Victoria, used to let the public on its land but the company says it became too much trouble to supervise. Now only employees are allowed to cut.

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Shawnigan division has some firewood sites, but the permit and the directions to get there will cost you $5 a cord — a stack four by four by eight feet. You have to be at their division headquarters on Waters Road west of Duncan before 4 p.m. on weekdays.

There are also a few unorthodox ways of getting your wood, if you can initiate yourself into the rather secretive firewood fraternity. Someone who's found his own spot usually keeps it quiet.

A Metchosin four-wheel drive enthusiast who admits to cutting a little alder on the sly says most back roads have areas where someone has cleared off the trees for 20 feet on either side.

And B.C. Forest Products Ltd. says taking alder from a big stand on the Port Renfrew road a few kilometres from Shawnigan Lake has become a common practice, although no permits are issued and the company tries to discourage cutting.

"For God's sake don't tell anyone about it," urged the Saanich man who tipped the Times about this particular place.

A part-time shake cutter who sometimes drives as far as Port Renfrew to find old cedar has a couple of private spots where he goes for firewood, but nothing would pry the locations out of him.

One reason for the scarcity of alder is that it has become a commercially valuable species. A BCFP spokesman at Crofton said it licenses commercial woodcutters and also cuts alder sawlogs itself, mainly for the export market where it's used in furniture.

How about driftwood? Hands off that as well, no matter how long the logs have been lying on the sand. Technically those logs still belong to the logging company which felled them or the beachcomber who has a log salvage licence for the area, and all the coast around Victoria, even the city beaches, are covered by log salvors.

And sometimes you get lucky. Stormy weather last weekend brought down an old alder almost a metre across at the butt in Hollywood Park on Fairfield Road. News travelled fast and by Tuesday, half the tree was gone, sawn and split into fireplace lengths.

The Victoria parks department seems to look the other way and allows residents to haul away storm-fallen trees and branches pruned from shade trees on city streets.

But in the end, maybe the easiest and cheapest way is just to call one of the guys who advertise in the classified ads. Prices this year range from $45 to $65 a cord, cheap if you consider the expenses of getting your own — $18-$20 a day to rent a chainsaw and at least $30 to rent and buy gas for a pickup truck, not counting your own sweat and labor.

Brice says she'll seek council seat

Greater Victoria school board trustee Susan Brice announced Friday she will seek election to Oak Bay council in November.

"I have enjoyed serving as a school trustee and would now like the opportunity to contribute my ideas and experience at the municipal level," Brice said.

"It is important to maintain a balance between municipal services and the taxpayers ability to pay for these services as council strives to preserve the character and charm of Oak Bay for which we the residents are so proud."

Brice, who lives at 880 Island, taught elementary school for seven years and is a former member of Camosun College Council and the Oak Bay Recreation Commission.

She was elected to the school board in November, 1974 and topped the polls in re-election in 1976 and 1978. She served as chairman in 1977 and 1978.

Brice said if she is elected an Oak Bay alderman, she hopes to be able to continue as a school trustee.

"It would mean one hectic year but I think I could handle it. I feel I have an obligation to fulfill my term as trustee."

Five of the six aldermanic seats will be up for election this year, instead of the usual three, because of the resignation of Ald. Norm Pimlott and the decision by Ald. Shirley Dowell to run for the mayoralty against former alderman John Goult.

Mayor Brian Smith is retiring, following his election as Oak Bay-Gordon Head MLA.

Roadblock nabs three impaired

Three persons were charged with impaired driving and one with possession of marijuana after Colwood RCMP, checked 1,578 vehicles overnight in roving roadblocks.

A police spokesman said today one motorist was given a 24-hour roadside suspension, another was charged with driving without insurance, 12 were handed out traffic tickets and 102 given warnings to have their vehicles tested.

Colwood RCMP also reported that two trail bike riders received cuts and bruises in a freak accident near Highland Road in Colwood Friday.

A spokesman said Pat McFadden, 20, of 123 Conard and Donald Brens, 16, of 1218 Lockley Drive collided head-on rounding a blind curve on a dirt trail on private property shortly before 2 p.m.

McFadden was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated for a chest injury and cuts to his right ankle.

Brens, who suffered a bruised ankle did not require hospital treatment.

Mayor promises review of road building order

North Saanich Mayor George Westwood said today council will take another look at a municipal order which would force a home builder to put in a costly new road to his property.

Westwood agreed the order, forcing John Shimizu to pave the road from the dead-end of Aboyne Road to his one-acre lot at 672 Aboyne, requires him to build a road to a higher standard than a portion of road which was put in by the municipality.

Aboyne, which runs off Ardmore, is a 13-foot wide gravel lane to the dead-end.

The municipality wants Shimuzu to pave his portion of the road to a width of 24 feet and has ordered him to have the work completed by Sept. 21.

The order says if he fails to meet the deadline municipal crews will do the job and charge him an estimated $8,000.

Shimuzu bought the property in the fall of 1977.

He had to post a $10,000 bond to cover the road costs before the municipality would issue a building permit.

He has already built a gravel road. That alone cost him $5,600.

Although five other property owners in the area have benefitted from the new road, none of them agreed to share in the cost and, Westwood said, there was no way the municipality could force them to do so.

Shimuzu said the municipality is treating him like a developer.

But, he said, if he finances the paving, he won't have any chance of collecting from the five other property owners when they decide to build on their lots.

He said he has appealed to council on several occasions to have the paving order rescinded, without success.

But Westwood said today the situation will be reviewed when council next meets on Sept. 24.

Until then the order will be held in abeyance.

He said home builders or developers opening up new areas not serviced by roads are expected to pay for all costs linking up their properties with existing roads.

A municipal bylaw requires new roads to be paved.

He felt the requirement is fair because real estate values of lots not serviced by roads are considerably lower than those which are.

Ask the Times

Q. How many men died in the Battle of the Somme in the First World War? W.H.D.

Family to share big win

It was all-in-the-family for three Greater Victorians who won $100,000 in the Aug. 29 draw of the Western Express lottery.

Sharing the big prize are Roy and Tia Paterson, of 1357 Esquimalt Road, Paterson's sister Grace Ryan, of Sooke, and his niece Shirley Parker of 605 Craigflower.

Paterson, 68, a retired woodworker, said they have been buying tickets since the lottery started and won $100 six weeks ago.

He said he intends to use his share to travel and for openers, he and his wife plan to take a trip to New Zealand.

"It's one place I've always wanted to see," he said.
